9 WAGE CONTRACTS NEGOTIATED

Gov't Hikes Up to 44%

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Salary increases averaging more than 20 per cent and ranging as high as 44 per cent for certain civil servants are included in new component contracts negotiated with the provincial government.

Details of the contracts are officially being kept secret by both the government and the B.C. Government Employees' Union (BCGEU) pending completion of contracts with all 13 occupation groups.

But nine of the components have already negotiated their first individual contracts and some of their new salary schedules have been released through cabinet orders.

Comparing the 1973 salary schedules with the available new wage scales reveals some junior categories of civil servants have been granted increases amounting to 44 per cent.

Four component settlements were used in the comparison and three of those granted across-the-board increases to all members of the occupational group.

The largest group, the Administrative Support Component, granted all 7,700 members a $100-monthly increase effective April 1, 1974, and an additional $60 increase effective Oct. 1, 1974.

In addition, each category was granted another increase on Jan. 1 and those increases appear to amount to about four per cent over the Oct. 1 salary level.

The combined increases mean a 44 per cent salary hike for those in Clerk 1 positions, who will go from $420 a month in 1973 to $605 a month as of Jan. 1.

For top clerks, the increase is about 26 per cent; for top key punch operators it amounts to 27 per cent; and for the lowest category of surveyors in the land registry branch it means about a 28 per cent increase.

Some groups have been granted cost-of-living increases, including the Administrative, Regulatory and Fiscal Component.

About 1,350 senior administrative people in that group appear to have been granted a $125 increase across-the-board as of April 1, 1974, and another, varying increase on Oct. 1, 1974, in addition to a cost-of-living hike.

Those increases, excluding the cost-of-living bonus, appear, for example, to amount to about 28 per cent for junior adminstration officers, about 23 per cent for junior appraisers, 26 per cent for senior appraisers, 34 per cent for junior driver examiners and 23 per cent for deputy sheriffs.

The cost-of-living index in the agreement is described in

Aid Plan Wisdom Probed

By DONALD MacDONALD
Times London Bureau

LONDON — The wisdom of a Canadian aid project in Tanzania is questioned in a leading British scientific magazine this week.

The New Scientist says a newly automated bakery set up with the help of more than $1 million in Canadian tax revenue in Dar es Salaam may not be the best idea for that country at its current stage of development.

The magazine says small bakeries in Dar es Salaam had been providing sufficient bread using wood or charcoal burning boilers and a flexible range of raw materials, including maize, during the recent wheat shortage.

A condition of the loan was that Canadian equipment supplied by a company called Baker-Perkins be used. The new plant, 100-per-cent imported from Canada, has an oil-fired boiler and must have all spare parts imported from Canada, according to the New Scientist.

Furthermore, "the bakery requires 50 per cent hard wheat, which has to be imported as it cannot be grown locally."

The cost-per-job is rated at $46,000 as opposed to $2,000 had the existing Dar es Salaam technology been used.

Production in local bakeries "has to be cut" and employment in the industry "will stagnate for the next few years."

OTTAWA — The Canadian International Development Agency is rushing to spend $117 million within the next three months in an effort to impress Treasury Board officials.

Lagging disbursements in the bilateral branch of CIDA are believed to be causing concern because they shortfall the Treasury Board's $497.95 million limit set for 1974-75 bilateral spending.

CIDA apparently feels it must spend the leftover $117 million in order to strengthen its bargaining position when the Treasury considers the agency's 1975-76 cash allocation.

This effort tends to bear out one of the main contentions of CIDA dissidents — that the chief emphasis in the agency is placed on producing figures to support an impression that Canada is in the vanguard of nations providing development assistance.

The purpose is to meet the target of the World Bank's Commission on International Development headed by Lester B. Pearson, the late Prime Minister. This suggested that by 1975 official aid should reach 0.7 per cent of the gross national product of donor countries.

In fact, the Canadian government has never set a specific date for achieving this objective. It remains a CIDA preoccupation without official sanction.

It is understood that of the several government departments and agencies represented on the Canadian International Development Board, only CIDA favors setting a date for the 0.7 per cent objective.

"Your career in CIDA depends on how you spend," a former Agency official said. "You are constantly being

NO REAL ANSWER

OTTAWA (CP) — Questions fired at Prime Minister Trudeau regarding a reported multi-million dollar spending spree by the Canadian International Development Agency drew response, but no real answers, from House Leader Mitchell Sharp in the Commons Thursday.

Sharp merely reiterated an earlier promise by External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen that CIDA will be studied by a Commons committee.

Congress, Unions Angered by Ford

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Acting before Democrats in Congress could stop him and over the protests of many groups including the AFL-CIO, President Ford Thursday signed into law his plan to increase oil-import fees.

The action will raise gasoline prices at least three cents a gallon and also poses the possibility of a Congressional veto showdown from angered lawmakers, many of whom favored a gasoline rationing program.

Governors of at least four northeastern states, which depend heavily on imported oil, also promised suits attempting to overturn the tariff.

George Meany, President of the AFL-CIO called Ford's overall plan to deal with problems of energy and recession "the weirdest" and unveiled alternative proposals.

The giant labor federation called for gas rationing and a ban on imports of oil from countries which embargoed shipments to the United States and the Netherlands last year.

The order Ford signed Thursday creates a $1 a barrel tariff on imported oil effective Feb. 1, rising to $3 in April.

"It seemed to me the time for conversation had ended and we had to act," the President explained on a television interview Thursday night.

Ford hopes the tariff will begin to reduce U.S. dependence on foreign oil and that higher gas prices will persuade Americans to conserve fuel.

"We've diddled and dawdled long enough," he said at an impromptu news conference after signing the proclamation.

Second Research Officer Quits

Maureen Stirling, a research officer within the department of education's problem-riddled research and development division has resigned.

She told the Times from Vancouver today she sent a telegram to deputy minister Jack Fleming at 8 p.m. Thursday "advising of my resignation effective immediately."

She said she is shocked at the atrocious behavior of Fleming following the firing of the division head Stanley B. Knight last week.

"I no longer see it possible to work in the division. The mandate given us was to implement the White Paper on education and it no longer seems to be possible, with the subsequent muzzling of division staff after Dr. Knight was fired."

She said she attended one meeting with the deputy minister and division workers were told then that the probation of all the workers would be extended indefinitely.

"He chose his words very carefully and didn't say when the probation would end. It adds to the anxiety among all the division staff," she said.

Reason given for probation extension was simply that "no one could be evaluated fairly at this point in time," she added.

Stirling said Fleming told division members he is hiring four consultants, headed by University of Victoria's dean of education George Pedersen to evaluate the "capabilities" of the division.

"It looks as if the division will not be able to do anything in the field of education for quite some time," she said.

Short-Term Loan Rates Collapsing

Short-term interest rates continued to collapse across North America today, apparently to counter the competition from Arab oil countries loaning billions at 8 per cent.

Canadian banks and trust companies have reduced the rate they will pay for short-term money to 6.5 per cent (or to 6 per cent in some cases), down from 10.5 per cent two months ago.

The Bank of Montreal announced Thursday it will drop its major interest categories effective Feb. 1, with the prime rate falling to 9.75 per cent from 10.5 per cent.

Other banks are expected to do the same.

The banks had cut the rate from 11 per cent to 10.5 per cent two weeks ago.

A further drop is expected in mortgage interest rates as well. They are down to 11.5 per cent from 12 per cent and a further decline to 10.75 per cent has been forecast.

"This drop could come any day," a spokesman for a Victoria trust company said.

Meanwhile, J. A. Baines, manager of the main branch of the Bank of Montreal in Victoria, said today there had been no word of changes in mortgages rates in the general rate decline announced by his company in Montreal.

Maclean's Revives Plans for Weekly

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The president of Maclean-Hunter Ltd., Donald Campbell said Thursday his company will reactivate planning for publication of a weekly newsmagazine in the wake of the federal government's decision to cancel tax privileges to Time and Reader's Digest.

"We've done some rough work for the past few years that we had to put on the shelf," he said.

"Now, we'll take it off the shelf."

Maclean - Hunter is the owner of Maclean's Magazine and one option would be to turn Macleans from its present monthly format into a weekly news publication, Campbell said.

The legislative changes, however, produced differing responses from Time and Reader's Digest.

Stephen LaRue, president of Time Canada, said the decision will mean the death of the Canadian edition of Time which features about 10 per cent Canadian content.

Reader's Digest was more optimistic.

The government wants to provide incentives for creation of Canadian news magazines said Hancox and if they now are not formed "it will be a great tragedy."

Because Reader's Digest "is not in competition with news magazines," Hancox speculated legislation would perhaps be amended to permit the publication's Canadian advertisers to continue deducting advertising fees from their income tax.

He was confident the government would not jeopardize the future of the Reader's Digest Canadian edition, although State Secretary Hugh Faulkner said the proposed changes would affect that publication.

NO B.C. AID TO OLYMPICS

Premier Dave Barrett said today that "under no circumstances" will B.C. pay money to the federal government to offset the deficit of the 1976 Montreal summer Olympics.

"I see no reason people in the province should be assessed for taxes to pay for the deficit," said Barrett, "it's nonsense." The premier made the comment following a report Quebec is requesting additional federal aid for the Olympics since costs have more than doubled the original estimate of $300 million.

CN SHUT DOWN

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian National Railways' transcontinental rail service was suspended Thursday night after trains were cancelled in New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario and the West because of walkouts of locomotive engineers.

Alberta and British Columbia were the most severely affected, with the CNR suspending virtually all freight and passenger services in the two provinces, effective today.

The engineers began booking off sick or for study sessions across Canada Thursday and would give no indication when they will return to work.

They are seeking a change in their contract to give them the same 15-per-cent wage increase that members of other railway unions received Jan. 1. The members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers are not due to receive their 15-per-cent increase until May 1.

Caught or Not, Smuggled Men's Future Bleak

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Young Punjabi men illegally smuggled into Canada face a grim future if they are caught and sent back to India —but the outlook is almost as bleak if their entry attempt is successful.

The men, usually young and usually married, often spend the rest of their days paying off a mortgage company debt if they are caught and sent home.

But if they slip into the country undetected, they face a life indentured to the agent who lured them to Canada with tales of prosperity and happiness.

The Victoria immigration office earlier this week broke a smuggling operation which brought 25 of the young Punjabis into Victoria International airport between Dec. 20 and Jan. 20.

Twelve of them have already been deported and others, with relatives in Canada, were allowed to stay for a three-month visit after first posting a cash bond ensuring their departure after the three months are up.

The agent who lured the men here is also an East Indian who lives off his own people, to the great disgust of the East Indian community.

"In every country there are people who try to take advantage of their own people," says Ajaib Singh Sangha, one of the elders of Victoria's Sikh community.

"The farms are in the family. They are passed down from father to son, father to son, and many families have been on the same piece of land for 400 or 500 years."

And then along comes a slick-talking agent. He tells one of the young men of the family how good things are in Canada.

"He tells them, we'll take you there, to Canada, where there are lots of jobs for everyone and lots of money," Sangha says.

"And these people fall victim to their own ignorance. They are law-abiding and peaceful. If they knew the laws and regulations they wouldn't come here."

But the young men are taken in. They mortgage the family farm to get enough money to put a down payment on the agent's asking price for a ticket to Canada, which often runs as high as $10,000.

"They are easy prey for these agents," Sangha says. "Then if they are caught and sent back, the farm is already mortgaged."

If the years are good, the family can work on paying off the mortgage, but if the years are bad, the farm can be repossessed, and then they have nothing.

Sangha himself came to Canada 50 years ago, legally, and has raised a family of four sons and two daughters.

He knows the problems faced by the Indian immigrants who come here in accord with the immigration laws.

For those who come illegally, the hardships are much worse.

A few years ago, sawmills and the outpost logging camps were a favorite repository of new East Indian immigrants, both legal and illegal.

SANGHA

Bleak Future Ahead For Smuggled Men

But both automation of mills, which has eliminated the unskilled jobs, and the slump in the lumber industry have changed that now, Singh said.

Singh tells a story of a man he knows who came to Canada with his family. None of them spoke English and the promised "prosperity and happiness" were nowhere to be seen.

The only job they could get, Singh says, was working on a farm in the Lower Mainland, picking the fruit and vegetables in season.

"They were incredibly mistreated," he says.

The farms have an East Indian agent in Vancouver and the agent rounds up enough people to work on the farm and then he takes a cut of the wages which are too low anyway."

If the man is trying to pay off a debt of between $5,000 and $10,000 to the agent who brought him to Canada in the first place, it will take him all his life.

"It's our own people who are taking advantage of the new people, getting them to mortgage or sell their farms in India and then leaving them with nothing. I guess that makes it all the worse."

Singh thinks an immigrant should have to be nominated for entry into Canada by someone already here who will look after the person for the first five years, teaching him the language and helping him assimilate in Canadian society.

"There are some of our own people who are making thousands of dollars by exploiting people who don't know any better."

The smuggling operations are difficult to halt. All the immigration department can do is pick up the people as they come in, and the agent goes free. The charges are difficult to prove.

But the elder Sikhs, like Sangha, feel justice will be served — eventually.

"It's the ignorant people who get hurt," says Sangha. "The smart guy makes the money.

"But you never get something for nothing, you must pay for everything you do.

"The smart guy will have to pay in the long run."

50 SPIES? YOU JEST, SAYS CIA

WASHINGTON (CP) — Even for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), "50 spies . . . is an awful lot of spies."

The CIA, always under fire abroad but more recently embroiled in allegations of domestic spying, traditionally greets all inquiries about its activities with a tight-lipped "No comment."

Thursday, however, those tight lips split into a wide grin over a report that "at least 50" CIA spies had been circulating in Canada with the co-operation of the RCMP.

"Fifty spies? That's an awful lot of spies," the CIA official spokesman said with a laugh.

"Or is it so few you're insulted?"

The story quoted Edmonton book publisher Mel Hurtig as saying that not only had 50 spies been active in Canada, but that the CIA has field officers working as attaches and consuls-general in Toronto, Calgary and Vancouver.

"There are a lot of wild stories going around, especially now," the CIA spokesman said. "We've taken the position that we can't comment on any of them.

"But 50 spies—whew."

If the CIA could not comment, however, usually diplomatic sources at the state department were happy to.

"It's a complete falsehood," one high official said to the allegation of CIA agents working out of the consulates.

"What would they be doing in Calgary? Taking in the Stampede?"

To Hurtig's claim to have a list of names of all CIA agents "working under the guise of legal or cultural affairs at U.S. consulates in Canada," the spokesman retorted:

"He can say what he wants, but it just ain't so.

"The man should have some sense of his own reputation. Maybe he believes this, but it just isn't so.

"I guess the silly season is upon us."

Interest Rates Sliding

a further lowering of the rate soon."

However, the main downward pressure was on short-term rates which were collapsing so quickly there were signs of temporary disorder in the banking system.

A drop had been anticipated but not so far, so quickly, Baines said. Long-term rates were declining in a more orderly fashion.

Long-term rates would follow the United States pattern but would remain sightly higher because of Canada's need to borrow more than $8 billion in foreign money markets in 1975.

Bank of America cut its prime rate to 9.5 per cent from 10 per cent. First National City Bank and Morgan Guaranty Trust reduced their prime rates to 9.5 per cent from 9.75 per cent. All changes take effect on Monday.

Other U.S. banks are expected to follow the lead. The prime rate, which is offered large commercial and industrial borrowers, had hit 12 per cent in the U.S. last fall. One banker, James J. O'Leary, vice chairman of Irving Trust of New York, predicted a collapse of the prime rate to 7 per cent by summer.

Some Canadian bankers expected the U.S. move to bring an annoucement this weekend from the Bank of Canada. On Jan. 12, a Sunday, the Bank of Canada announced it was lowering its rate to 8.25 per cent from 8.75 per cent, triggering an across-the-board reduction in prime rates by Canadian banks.

The Bank of Canada traditionally makes announcements at times the stock markets are closed.

Meanwhile, the declining interest rates have proved to be a major stimulant to the stock markets which experienced low prices and little activity when interest rates were high.

Raises High in Contracts

cabinet orders as amounting to "one per cent increase in salary on a base rate of $1,149 per month for every one per cent increase in the Consumer Price Index — Vancouver — from September, 1974, to June, 1975."

Thei third component surveyed, including 3,000 civil servants in the environment and resources area, appears to have won a $100-monthly across-the-board increase as of April 1, 1974 and a $70 increase effective Oct. 1, 1974.

In addition, increases were granted in the contract effective April 1, 1975, and those increases appear to vary between about five and nine per cent.

Total increases for that component amount to as much as 44.5 per cent over the year for junior forestry assistants who will go from $505 a month in 1973 to $730 effective April 1 this year.

Junior conservation officers appear to be granted for example, about a 35 per cent increase, top conservation officers will receive about a 29 per cent increase and top museum technicians will receive an increase of about 24 per cent.

The final component studied, Correctional Services, appears to have gained variable increases for its 1,500 prison workers.

Security officers, for example, appear to receive a 26 per cent increase in two steps, senior correction officers and food service officers will receive about a 31 per cent increase and shop foremen will receive an additional 17 per cent.

DEBT RISING

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon Thursday asked Congress to raise the national debt ceiling to $604 billion from the present temporary ceiling of $495 billion.

The country is scheduled to pass the present limit on Feb. 18, and unless quick action is taken to raise that figure, the government will soon be legally unable to borrow enough to pay its bills.

Simon stressed that the $109 billion increase would be sufficient to carry the country through to June 30, 1976, provided the Congress passes no new federal spending programs.

$117M Spending Spree

hammered over the head and told 'Spend! Spend'."

"It's not how well you spend your money, but quantitively. Can you spend the budget allocated to you? That's what counts."

A second official said: "The whole criteria here is spend. Anyone who says it isn't doesn't know the facts."

The issue of quality versus quantity is one that rises constantly in CIDA. People who have left the organization say that the pressure to spend results in the approval of many dubious projects.

"Projects that go before the review committee get a rating of "pass," "fail," or send back for rewrite." A former official said: "I've never seen one that failed."

A university administrator said he had presented many projects to CIDA during the past few years. He expresses surprise that none was turned down.

The bilateral shortfall this year comprises $86 million in loans and $31 million in grants.

The official reason for such a shortfall are several but within CIDA some have been described as "poor excuses."

They include supply constraints in agriculture, steel and other commodities, which were known when allocation preparations were being made by the agency last year; and changes in the priorities of recipients which, within CIDA are considered to be no greater problem this year than in the past.

One of the most important reasons for the shortfall is known within CIDA to be uncertainty brought about by administrative turmoil in the agency's offices. Desk officers have complained of unsettling conditions resulting from reorganizations, new spending procedures, and the like.

World wide inflation is, however, thought to be a genuine contributing factor.

Several of the "poor excuses" have apparently been put forward to the External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen, and to members of the Canadian International Development Board as "factors" in the disbursement lag.

It is not known at this stage whether or not the minister has agreed to CIDA's proposals for spending the $117 million.

Those proposals include the acceleration of existing projects—loans and grants would be increased to various countries now receiving CIDA money

Recipient countries and areas included are the Caribbean, Pakistan, Sri Lanka, Tanzania and Mali.

A recent loan to Indonesia is likely to bring questions when CIDA president Paul Gerin-Lajoie next appears before a Commons committee.

At a meeting of the miscellaneous estimates committee on Nov. 29, some of the MPs expressed reservations about continuing aid to oil producing countries such as Algeria, Nigria and Indonesia.

Gerin-Lajoie told them that while there would be further expenditures in the immediate future, the question of Canadian co-operation with these countries was presently under consideratin.

Within the next month, CIDA presented and got quick ministerial approval for a loan of $12.5 million to provide 11 Twin Otter STOL planes to Indonesia.

The planes will be used to provide regular freight and passenger service to cities not now served by Merpati Nusantara Airlines (MNA), a regional carrier.

MPs opposed to further loans to oil producing countries will find this one difficult to understand. MNA is a privately owned airline, not a government one, and is already the recipient of seven twin Otters by a previous CIDA agreement.

At present, subsidized by the government of Indonesia, it is expected to become self-supporting about five years.

On the face of it, Canada would seem to be contributing to the success of a private company with a no interest loan to be repaid in 50 years.

Skies were clear in the Cariboo overnight and as a result temperatures dropped to the low 20s. In contrast the coast was cloudy with showers, readings were near 40 degrees. Some sunshine is expected in the north today but the south will remain cloudy with a few showers in coastal areas and a few snowflurries inland. On Saturday rising pressures will force the track of the wandering weather systems well to the south of British Columbia. This will lead to more sunshine and clearer weather for the weekend.

Arena Drive Rolling

By PETER MEDWID
Times Staff

The residents of Sooke are "tired of being lied to" and are stepping up their campaign to force the Capital Region Board to keep its promise that Sooke will get an arena.

Robert W. Saunders of the Sooke Chamber of Commerce said Thursday he and the others will start "pushing the governments" to get the facility that was voted on more than 14 months ago.

"More than 80 per cent cast ballots in favor of an arena. There has been a lot of work by the community association by donating more than $200,000 in land and work and nothing has been accomplished since."

Saunders says the board is "fooling around" and "we've been taken to the cleaners."

He said that when the project first started people in Sooke started looking at plans of other facilities built across the province and came up with six possible designs — all of which were turned over to the region.

The "region has collected a lot of money from us through taxation but no money has come back to Sooke."

Saunders said he talked to MLA Jim Gorst and it was indicated that a decision from the province (they pay a share of the costs) will be coming within a week.

Saunders said he was also told by Gorst that the province received only last week papers from the regional board that should have been delivered 14 months ago.

"We're shocked that the authorization for the arena was put through 14 months ago and nothing has been done."

Saunders said several people have been working putting in "tremendous" amounts of time in trying to get the facility going.

He cited Somenos elementary principal Dale Clarke and vice-principal Charles Parslow of Milnes Landing School as two. Another he said is Len Jones, president of the Sooke Community Association, "who worked night and day on this."

Also adding their efforts are the Port Renfrew Recreation Association, who are keenly interested in having a facility their members can use. About 300 letters of protest have been sent the regional board.

There are 10,000 people in the Sooke region.

He said Colwood never had a long wait between passing the referendum for the rink and actual construction. He wonders why this is happening to Sooke.

Saunders says there are a lot of jobless in the area who could be put to work.

New Bureaucracy Spawned in Ottawa

By MARJORIE NICHOLS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — There was no formal birth announcement, but the federal government is the proud parent of a new little bureaucracy known as the Consultation Secretariat.

The role assigned this newest addition is to provide aid and assistance to Ottawa in its new-found consensus approach to combatting the evils of inflation.

The secretariat staff, seconded from other government departments, now numbers only about a dozen. But they have an office and a telephone number and an official name and a promising growth potential.

As the secretariat's information officer said Wednesday, "we might be here two or three months or a little longer . . . but we don't know. This is an exploratory phase."

The terms of reference of the secretariat are difficult to define with any precision. But in general the secretariat staff will act as logistics officers for the federal politicians assigned the task of arriving at a consensus on methods for fighting inflation.

"The secretariat," the information officer explained, "is really the servant of an ad hoc committee of deputy ministers" which in turn reports to the Cabinet.

In brief, the secretariat has been charged with the task of rounding up willing groups of Canadian workers, professionals and politicians and businessmen and getting them into the same conference room with groups of federal ministers to jawbone about inflation.

The first of these conferences was held Wednesday in an Ottawa hotel with members of the Canadian Labor Conference and John Munro and Manpower Minister Robert Andras.

The secretariat spokesman said plans are now being drafted for other meetings with other groups in Ottawa and elsewhere across the country.

If all goes well, the next of these closed-door conferences will be with representatives of the medical profession.

While the approach to the problem of inflation may still be a bit vague in the minds of many, there is one certainty about these summit meetings: Details of the discussions will be regarded as state secrets.

There will be no statements issued by participants at the conclusion of the meetings and, no documents published.

The secretariat spokesman described Wednesday's meeting with the labor leaders, including CLC President Joe Marris, as "highly informal . . . they are not sitting down at the table."

In this "exploratory phase," he said, the objectives are to discuss the courses of action that are available and to decide whether there is a willingness on the part of the various sectors of the economy to "cooperate to achieve greater price stability."

The condept for the closed-door conference approach to combatting inflation was proposed by the Finance Minister in the Nov. 18 budget, when he called for a "comprehensive series of consultations with all sectors of the economy to seek to develop a cooperative national effort to slow down increases in costs and prices."

A call to the office late Wednesday afternoon produced a very reluctant civil servant, who refused to identify himself, his function or the location of the chair in which he was seated.

When pressed for details he announced that he was "terribly busy" and said that any information would have to be had from the information officer, who was at the conference with the minister and the labor leaders.

NAKED TRUTH?

KAMPALA (UPI) — The Voice of Uganda newspaper today published a front-page nude photograph of former foreign minister Elizabeth Bagaya and accused her of "selling herself."

It was the newest attack on the former Princess Elizabeth of Toro, a one-time fashion model who served as her country's spokesman at the United Nations in New York.

President Idi Amin fired her last year, alleging she was a paid agent for unnamed foreign powers and accusing her of disgracing Uganda by making love to a foreign diplomat in a washroom at Orly Airport in Paris.

The publication of the photograph in the government newspaper coincided with the start of three days of celebrations marking the fourth anniversary of Amin's seizure of power.

Nanaimo School Pact Near

NANAIMO — A tentative agreement has been reached in the dispute between Nanaimo school board and its locked-out non-teaching employees.

Negotiating committees for both sides will now take the proposed 1975 contract to members for ratification by Saturday night, school board chairman Joe Kilner said today.

Negotiators for the school board and for Local 606 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees are unanimously recommending acceptance of the agreement, which was reached after a long bargaining session Thursday.

Kilner said no details of the agreement will be released until it is ratified.

However, he said a number of items previously agreed to were adopted again when bargaining resumed Thursday.

The school board had broken off talks last Saturday and withdrawn its offers regarding job security and a cost of living clause.

U.S. Meddling End Sought

WINNIPEG (CP) — External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said Thursday he has started talks with U.S. authorities with a view to ending the situation whereby American law can interfere with exports from Canada.

In a speech to the Winnipeg branch of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs, the minister said he seeks a change in American attitude on exports to countries such as Cuba to go along with legislation now before Parliament.

He was speaking on U.S.-Canada relations, particularly the need for consultations such as those he has started, so that cross-border irritations resulting from domestic actions can be minimized.

MacEachen mentioned the Trading with the Enemy Act of the U.S., which, among other things, forbids exports to Cuba and which has been used to hamper exports to Cuba from U.S. subsidiaries in Canada.

"If consultation is to be used in this instance, as I think it should be, it would be our objective that . . . companies doing business in Canada would not be deterred by the United States from doing normal export businesss.

"Indeed I have initiated discussions with the U.S. authorities with a view to finding a satisfactory solution to this problem."

The minister referred to bills that have received approval in principle in the Commons that would, in effect, prevent application of U.S. laws to companies in Canada.

It is believed that when this legislation becomes law some American businessmen will be caught in a box. They will break U.S. laws if they permit exports to Cuba from Canadian subsidiaries and break Canadian laws if they don't.

MacEachen said it is hoped the Canadian legislation will solve a large part of the problem of American interference with Canadian exports.

He added: "What is needed, in addition, is a change in U.S. law and practice so that Canadian companies will be able to pursue normal export business in a manner consistent with Canadian law and policy."

Dairy Farm Subsidy Hiked

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Egene Whelan announced today an increase in the indirect federal subsidies to producers of industrial milk, used mainly to make powdered milk, cheese and butter.

The change applies only to industrial milk and will not affect consumer prices for fluid milk, he told the Commons.

It increases the "target support price" to $10.02 a hundredweight from $9.41, which has been in effect since last Aug. 1.

Whelan said the increase is in line with a government commitment to dairy farmers that their returns would be related to production costs. Recent Statistics Canada figures showed costs had risen steeply in 1974.

The agriculture minister's announcement drew critical reaction from opposition members, who said the price boost is not enough.

Farmers and Food Costs

That was a curious statement made by Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich to the annual convention of the B.C. Fruit Growers Association in Kelowna. He said farmers must be on guard against ill-informed and mischievous people who are trying to discredit agriculture.

"We appear to have been singled out for clumsy deceptions and sharp public scrutiny in a general atmosphere of ignorance and mistrust," he said in a speech to orchardists. Increasingly, claimed Stupich, farmers are being portrayed as the "fat cats" of society gouging the poor consumer with higher and higher prices.

"It may all be grossly unfair, but as food prices rise along with other prices in this period of monetary inflation, many consumers tend to vent their anger on the primary food producer, particularly if that producer is involved in any way with a commodity marketing board."

Odd, but we hadn't noticed any terrible cries of outrage directed against the farmer per se, unless Stupich is talking about the fully-justified howls of outrage directed at the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency over the rotten egg scandal, and a couple of other marketing boards.

Rather, there's probably been widespread support for what Stupich and the present provincial government have done to shore up agriculture in British Columbia, starting with the Land Commission Act and extending to more liberal loan provisions and the Farm Income Assurance Act, which could end the 1974-75 fiscal year having put $30 million into B.C. farmers' hands. That's $30 million in tax dollars raised from everyone in B.C., consumer and farmer alike. For that amount, the consumer might have a few words to say about farmers and agriculture.

Public criticism of agriculture is pretty mild compared with some of the attacks on other sectors of Canadian society. It's the one thing we're all agreed upon, that farming as a way of life should be preserved. The family farm and homestead is part of the Canadian myth. Criticism such as came from union leader Syd Thompson of the International Woodworkers of America this week is the exception that proves the rule.

Consumers "can't continue to be held up for ransom on food prices to keep a few small farmers in business," he said. Most food is produced by big concerns and they need no help at all, added Thompson. He challenged the government to set up farmers' markets and do away with wholesalers and supermarkets.

Anyway, he was attacking the wholesale-retail system of marketing food as much as he was lambasting the farmer. Consumer advocates have sounded the same theme recently. Stupich himself last July promised an investigation, perhaps a royal commission, into the matter, something that would show once and for all where the money goes.

At present, the whole thing is a mystery. Every few months the price of a quart of milk or a loaf of bread goes up a few more pennies and the consumer on the receiving end grumbles resignedly. It's hard to understand or justify the enormous spread between what the farmer is paid and the shelf price in the store.

Stupich has said little about the idea since first proposing it seven months ago. Now might be a good time to dust it off.

Four-Wheeled Coffins?

A report by the provincial transport department that almost one of every five new cars fails the government's mandatory automobile test — some with serious defects in brakes and steering mechanisms — backs up suspicions which have been held for years by some automotive observers.

Ever since consumer advocate Ralph Nader first broached the subject with his book Unsafe At Any Speed, it's been suspected that mechanical failure is the cause of many more motor vehicle accidents than generally believed. It may be just as serious a highway killer as alcohol or excessive speed or poorly-designed roads or driver carelessness.

In fact many road deaths put down to one of these causes may in fact have been caused by mechanical failure. But with a car wrapped around a utility pole or several hundred feet down an embankment, who's going to take the time for the necessary painstaking investigation?

As well as warning drivers to make sure their vehicles aren't potential "four - wheeled coffins," Transport Minister Robert Strachan could also commission an accident cause study by ICBC or B.C. Research to find out just how widespread is mechanical failure. Although the president of the Automotive Retailers Association agrees and says malfunctioning automobiles are becoming the rule rather than the exception, some auto dealers scoff at Strachan's claims.

But if nearly 20 per cent of new cars fail their first test, a third of them with serious problems such as missing tie rod cotter pins and brake shoes, then how many British Columbians who own older vehicles are riding about in ready-made hearses? It's an area where some hard facts and figures are needed soon.

HAROLD GREER

Ont. Tories Out After 31 Years?

TORONTO — The Gallup poll showing the Liberals, for the first time in 31 years, the most popular provincial party in Ontario comes as no surprise to the governing Conservative party.

The Tories have known about this state of public opinion for some time through their private polls, which they take regularly but leak only if they are favorable. These show that the Liberals have been the most popular Ontario party since last summer.

Ironically, the Gallup poll had even a hint of a Tory silver lining to it. The last party sampling was so bad that the Tories will not even admit to taking it. It showed the Conservatives to be running third in some traditionally Conservative areas. The Gallup poll at least placed the Tories ahead of the NDP province-wide.

The Gallup combined two samplings taken in November and December on the standard question: "If an Ontario provincial election were held today, which party's candidate do you think you would favor?"

No One Surprised

Of those having an opinion (28 per cent were undecided), the Liberals were supported by 41 per cent, the Conservatives by 33 and the NDP by 26. The Ontario general election of October, 1971, produced a split in the popular vote of 28 per cent Liberal, 45 per cent Conservative and 27 per cent NDP.

Translated, what the poll shows is that if an Ontario election were held today and there has been no change in public opinion since December, there is a 95 per cent chance that the best the Conservatives could do would be to form a minority government. There is an overwhelming chance that the Liberals would form a majority government. Perhaps no one close to Ontario politics should be to surprised at this. One would have to be senseless not to think there has been a major shift in public opinion against the government in the past year—but the political impact of the Gallup can hardly be denied nevertheless.

Whether one believes them or not (and wise men do, within their limits) public opinion polls are tangible and confirmatory, in that they tend to support what one hoped, suspected or feared. They therefore have a self-fulfilling effect in politics, buoying up the winners, making the losers more defensive than ever, and generally forcing political events and discussion into a new context or frame of reference.

For example, premier William Davis just happened to return from a Florida vacation the day after the poll was published and immediately he set about shuffling his cabinet. It had been decided weeks ago and was not related, except in the most general way, to the government's falling fortunes. Inevitably, however, it was reported, commented upon and viewed in the context of the Gallup results with, of course, the suggestion that it was a floundering reaction to cover lost ground.

Liberal leader Robert Nixon on the other hand just happened to be attending a big rally of Toronto-area Liberals the day the Gallup was published. It proved to be a tremendous fillip for Nixon's speech and Liberal spirits, just the thing Liberal workers needed (Liberals have been their own worst enemies in this regard) to convince them they can win.

ROBERT NIXON
. . . rising Liberal star

And win they will—provided the next election finds the voters in the same mood they are in today. That, however, is too much to count on. All sorts of things can happen, and no doubt will happen, to give the Conservatives a good fighting chance for re-election. The government, after all, decides when the election will be called and it is in a position to design the optimum stage-setting for it.

Personally, I doubt that anything the government does between now and election-time will matter much. The real question is what Robert Nixon and the Liberals do. The significance of the Gallup poll is not that the Conservatives are so much out of favor but that the Liberals are in.

That is, that the voters are not only prepared to reject the government but they are prepared to accept the Liberals as the alternative.

This is a fundamental change in Ontario politics. What has kept the Conservatives in power election after election has been, more than any other factor, the split in the opposition vote. Of every 100 voters in the last election, for example, 55 voted against the government but of those 55, 28 were Liberal and 27 were NDP. The Gallup poll shows the NDP, as might be expected, has maintained its base by and large, but the Conservative support has swung massively to the Liberals.

One would have expected, if the public mood was simply anti-government or anti-Conservative, for the NDP to get its share of the protest sentiment but this has not happened. It is therefore legitimate to conclude that a decisive number of voters have become so convinced the Conservatives must go that they have settled on the Liberals as the best way to get the Tories out.

Very Credible

If so, it has happened with Robert Nixon as Liberal leader, which is a key point the Tories are not appreciating. Their private polls tell them that despite their fall-off in party popularity, Davis is still ahead of Nixon on a leadership basis. This can be a pitfall for strategic errors, and the Tories appear to have fallen into it.

They are already attacking Nixon as a negative alternative, allegedly without anything positive to offer, when the Gallup poll would indicate that the voters have already considered this proposition and have decided that, even if true, it doesn't matter.

It doesn't matter, I suspect, because the voters simply favor a credible alternative to another four years of Conservative rule. They are not looking for policy alternatives except in the broad sense of a government which will stop doing many of the things — scandalous things, usually — the Conservatives have done.

In that sense, Nixon is a very credible, attractive alternative indeed and his major task now is to field candidates who are impressive enough to support the idea of the Liberals as the alternative government. That is now the key determinant of the next election.

No Pretences in White House

WASHINGTON — At the beginning of the new year, the most hopeful sign in Washington is the general decline of pretence. There are still a few windbags around pretending that everything will turn out rosy, but on the whole, the mood here is serious, and there is a greater willingness to face the economic and political facts.

Suddenly, all the big shots have been cut down to human size. The president doesn't pretend he has all the answers. One day he is fighting inflation with spending cuts and higher taxes, then he changes with the facts and proposes tax cuts and a bigger deficit to fight the recession — and doesn't grieve much over the switch.

Even the president's wife, who is expected by tradition to strike an adoring pose, treats her guy in public like any other fallible husband. Watching him on television celebrate International Woman's Year the other day, she took him by the hand and laughed and told him he had "come a long, long way."

Even Veep Works

Things are so bad now that even the vice president is given work to do. Unlike his predecessors, Nelson Rockefeller is spending most of his time downtown on the second floor of the executive office building across the street from the White House, making coffee for a stream of visitors. He hasn't had time to move into the new vice president's house on Observatory Hill, or move his family to town, or organize his staff. But already he is deeply involved in domestic and foreign policy, not to mention the CIA controversy, and is getting almost more assignments than he has time to handle.

The mood is different on Capitol Hill, too. Freshmen members of the house of representatives are supposed to slip quietly into town and tip their hats to the elders of the establishment.

This year, the 75 new Democratic party members arrived and demanded the right to question the Democratic chairmen of the committees, and their demand was granted. In the next few days, they will also be questioning Henry Kissinger.

The balance of power is shifting in congress. The authority of the autocratic chairmen of the committees is waning. The tragic collapse of Wilbur Mills is merely a symbol of a much wider dispersal of power. The new chairman of the ways and means committee will no longer have a veto over tax policy. It will, for good or bad, be determined by a much larger and more liberal ways and means committee. And even the leaders of the house, Speaker Carl Albert of Oklahoma and Majority Leader Tip O'Neill of Massachusetts, are no longer as secure in their jobs as they were a year ago.

GERALD FORD
. . . is being nice enough?

The reduction of personal authority in both the legislative and executive branches of the U.S. government extends even to men like Kissinger, the secretary of state, and to institutions like the Central Intelligence Agency, which have been relatively free of congressional control in the past.

Now Kissinger is complaining, with some justification, that congress is not only performing its duty to set the broad lines of foreign policy but is trying to dictate the day-to-day negotiations. And the CIA is protesting that it cannot run a secret intelligence operation if all its secrets are subject to public disclosure.

So the new mood around the White House and the congress raises some new questions. In both places, the procedures are more open and liberal.

Hugh Sidey of Time magazine, for example, notes that Richard Nixon's sliding door in the Oval Office, the secret entrance for secret guests, has been removed and plastered over at Ford's direction. The 15 eagles and 307 battle streamers in Nixon's oval office have disappeared, along with the tape-recording system, and the president of the United States is now available to members of the cabinet, congress and the press for candid discussion of the nation's problems.

All this is to the good, but the question now is how this new freedom will be used. Nothing in recent history has prepared Washington for the shared responsibility Ford is now offering to cabinet, congress, press and people. They have all been complaining in recent years that the president and his staff were doing too much and were too remote, and now they are complaining that President Ford is doing too little, not being decisive enough, not coming up with a program that will solve all our problems in a hurry.

Press Baffled

Even the press is slightly baffled by the president's informal and disarming ways. He gives interviews whenever he likes. Some of them are on the record, some of them are off the record, and usually he talks as frankly and casually as he did when he had the boys in for a drink on Capitol Hill.

In the process he exposes his problems and admits his dilemmas, uncertainties, and weaknesses. In other words, he is an honest man, limited in many ways and looking for help, insisting that the remedies lie not with him alone or even with the government as a whole, but with the co-operation of the whole nation — business, labor, and all the rest. In short, no pretence and the problem is that Washington hasn't yet adjusted to a president who admits honestly that he doesn't have all the answers.

Ex-Manager Replies

On January 18 there appeared a letter in your newspaper signed by six gentlemen who were members of the Victoria Symphony Society board in 1971. Their letter included the following statement:

"There have been five general managers of the symphony society in the past five years. The difficulties that each member has had with the conductor have been well-documented. Although the abilities of these men were exceptional, and their remuneration satisfactory, the pattern of difficulties was always the same, and they all resigned within a short time. This must be indicative to anyone who is trying to understand the present situation."

Not only was my relationship with Lazlo Gati excellent, but it still is and I can only think of one past general manager who may have left the symphony largely for the reason alleged to be the case with us all. My reasons for leaving are of record, I simply wished to better myself and I left in an atmosphere of good will with very few exceptions.

People speak of temperamental musicians. Frankly, I have met only one and he did not do the conducting. I have counted the six gentlemen who wrote that letter as my friends and I feel sure that, on reflection, they will agree that a public withdrawal of the quoted statement is in order.

In closing, may I stress that I do not choose to comment in any way on the situation confronting the present board. My sole reason for writing this letter is to try and correct a misrepresentation that is (to use the very words written by the magnificent six) — inaccurate, unfair and unjust.—John B. Addicott, 3119 Glasgow Street.

Victoria Drivers

I drove from the east coast in October to make my home in Victoria, without getting a scratch or bump on my car even though I hit black ice in northern Ontario.

On Wednesday afternoon (Jan. 15), I had some shopping to do and decided to take my car.

Within two blocks of my apartment, a panel truck drove through a stop sign and hit me on the driving side to the tune of some $750 damage and some very sore muscles. My driving door was jammed, and if the car had caught fire, I would not have had time to get out. My car was pushed onto the sidewalk, but luckily there were no pedestrians there.

To add insult to injury, I find I have to be without my car for at least two weeks, and I wonder if it is structurally safe after such a collision.

The ICBC appraiser stipulated that a second hand door be installed. Also I find that I have to pay about $50 surcharge as the dealer for my brand of car considers that the insurance paid does not cover all his expenses.

I like my new home in Victoria, and find in dealing with people that they are most courteous and helpful. Victoria drivers, please drive more carefully. Do not drive through stop signs, and do not drive through red lights.—Margaret Richardson, 826-440 Simcoe Street.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of January 24, 1915

NEW YORK — When the war broke out last August, the world was positive that there would be no more Paris fashions. American clothes for American women became the slogan of the day, emphasized by American dressmakers and manufacturers. After all was said and done, however, the silhouette which Paris launched in the same month is that which has taken America by storm this winter. The waist is close-fitting at the shoulders, with a waistline which is well-defined, and a short skirt, smooth over the hips and flaring at the ankles.

Banks, the Corporate Ethic, and U.S. Influence

By PETER NEARY
Canadian Forum

The recent elevation of Mr. William Mulholland to the presidency of the Bank of Montreal should give Canadians considerable pause. Have we really reached the point where no citizen of this country could be found to stand at the head of one of our largest banks? The Bank of Montreal enjoys great privileges in this land; it is high time that it began facing up to some of its national responsibilities. We are often exhorted to take pride in the fact that our banks are still Canadian owned. The banks do not deserve such approbation; while there has been a quick dollar in it for them, they have shown themselves time and again to be willing agents of multi-national corporations in the takeover of Canadian industry and resources.

Born in Albany, New York, Mr. Mulholland is an identikit corporate elite figure. A Harvard graduate — an impeccable proconsular credential these days — he served in the U.S. Army from 1944 to 1946.

He began his climb up the corporate ladder in 1952 at the age of 26 when he joined the New York financial house of Morgan Stanley. His subsequent career milestones include service as a trustee of the Hudson Institute and membership on the advisory council of the Institute of the Future in Middletown, Connecticut. In both instances he was an associate of Herman Kahn.

At Morgan Stanley Mr. Mulholland was an advisor to Rio Tinto-Zinc Corporation of London, a multinational corporation with holdings in many parts of the world. It was his connection with Rio Tinto that brought him to Canada. In 1970 he became President of the British Newfoundland Corporation (Brinco), an enterprise with which Rio Tinto was intimately connected through Tornwood Investments Ltd.

He began the Canadian phase of his career by assuming the direction of the immense Churchill Falls power project in Labrador, which was being pressed forward at the time by a Brinco subsidiary, Churchill Falls (Labrador) Corp. Ltd.

The Churchill Falls deal typifies just about everything that has been wrong with resource development in this country. When the Churchill propect was first mooted, Rene Levesque, then a cabinet minister in the Lesage government, wanted it to go forward under public ownership. Even though Hydro-Quebec was the obvious customer for the power, he did not get his way. The fact that the resource was located in Joey Smallwood's Newfoundland enabled Brinco to bull its way through.

In the entire recent history of Canada there is scarcely a better example of how a multi-national corporation can pit one province against another to its advantage. In its own blundering fashion the federal government put the icing on the Brinco cake. Thus the 1966 Public Utilities Income Tax Transfer Act was specifically designed to clear away the final obstacles to Brinco's lasting profitability.

That Ottawa should have been so subservient is not surprising when it is remembered that between 1963 and 1969 Mulholland's predecessors at Brinco had included Robert Winters, Henry Borden, a former president of Brazilian Traction, Light and Power Co. Ltd., and Donald Gordon.

The Churchill Falls deal gave Newfoundland and Quebec a short lived construction boom; it also gave Hydro-Quebec an important new source of energy — energy Brinco style. John Crosbie, who until recently was minister of finance in the Progressive Conservative government formed in Newfoundland in January, 1972, has characterized the Churchill Falls deal as "one of the greatest giveaways in commercial history." He should know, since he entered the Smallwood cabinet just eight days after the federal Public Utilities Income Tax Transfer Act, which he now evidently abhors, became law. Moreover, he sat in the Smallwood cabinet while further important concessions were meted out to Brinco in 1967.

Earlier this year Newfoundland purchased Churchill Falls (Labrador) Corporation but its action, taken under threat of nationalization, left intact the corporation's previous agreements. The province dared not do anything else. Indeed, its policy was directed not at remedying the mistakes of the past but at getting into a better bargaining position vis-a-vis Brinco in relation to the great hydro potential of the Gull Island site on the Lower Churchill River.

"Could we have attained a better deal?" John Crosbie rather pathetically asked of the Churchill Falls development in a July, 1973 article. His answer summed up the official Newfoundland position: "Tragic though the outcome is for Newfoundland there is little profit to be gained now in speculating on the answer."

Mr. Mulholland's point of view on the Churchill Falls deal was explained in an interview he gave Clair Balfour, a Globe and Mail reporter, in 1970. "We're in the business", he said, "of developing resources for shareholders." The same interview revealed that Mr. Mulholland had sold his partnership in Morgan Stanley and acquired 100,000 shares in Brinco.

The Bank of Montreal's role in the Churchill Falls saga is elusive. After the formation of the Moores Progressive Conservative government in 1972 the report of a commission of enquiry into the ownership of a number of Newfoundland liquor stores led to charges that the Bank had forgiven interest on loans made to former premier Smallwood and two associates, one of them a Bank director, to buy Brinco Shares. Considering the Bank of Montreal has been banker to the government of Newfoundland since 1895, this was startling news indeed.

The entire episode has since been quietly forgotten by all concerned but its ghost must surely linger on in the headquarters over which Mr. Mulholland will now preside.

In any case Newfoundland must be on the minds of Bank of Montreal shareholders for other reasons these days. The new head of the Bank has just left the presidency of a corporation with which the province had to fight for control of Churchill Falls (Labrador) Corporation. It is now the decided policy of the Newfoundland government that no power from the Gull Island site will leave the province.

MULHOLLAND
. . . back and forth

Yet Newfoundland is so vulnerable economically — or left so unprotected by Ottawa — that it may still have to negotiate a deal with Brinco to get the Lower Churchill project started.

One wonders how Mr. Mulholland and the Bank of Montreal would fit into that particular equation. Canada's first bank has a shabby record in Newfoundland and prospects for its improvement there look anything but encouraging.

The remainder of what the public has been allowed to glimpse of Mr. Mulholland offers few surprises. In 1970 the Globe and Mail reported that he intended to continue his predecessor's fight against the changes proposed by the Benson white paper on tax reform. Wage and price control Mr. Mulholland dismissed as something that "just plain doesn't work." And so it goes.

On one issue, however, he has changed his mind since 1970. In that year he revealed that he had no plans to become a Canadian citizen; being an American apparently posed no problems at Brinco. As Mr. Mulholland explained it, "I've been back and forth over the border for so many years."

Upon accepting the presidency of the Bank of Montreal he apparently decided to go the whole hog. To use his own words, "If taking out Canadian nationality were not a likelihood, I would not have taken the first step of accepting this job." There now, that ends that.

Olympic Rumbles Of Prejudice

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — An aspect of the Olympics "kafuffle" in Montreal reminds me of an angry retort I got before Christmas from a federal minister, a French Canadian. I'd been chatting about some trends of partisanship in the House of Commons and in reference to a juvenile argument about parliamentary privilege, I said that it wasn't in the Canadian tradition but a late arrival from Quebec politics.

The minister was fed up with such references, even in jest or in teasing. In politics in Canada, he said, being capable or stupid, being positive or negative, being rational or irrational, hadn't a damned thing to do with being French or English or Anglophone or Francophone. He was sick of such characterization.

A fair retort! Human nature, including its moral and mental aspects, is universal, not varying nationalistically or ethnically. None of us, however, completely escapes the sin of prejudice. Sometime, somewhere, we scorn or distrust the person from a different background and tradition. The contention over the 1976 Olympics — Mayor Drapeau's vain glory, Premier Bourassa's near-separatism, COJO's incompetence, the federal dodging of responsibility, the Montreal trade union cancer and the feudal apparatus of the international Olympic Committee (IOC) — has this dark side. I hear these kinds of comments.

"They've loaded the set-up with patronage appointments at high wages and higher expense accounts. How could they get anything done on time or on budget?

"The fix has been in for five years. Once Trudeau OK'd Drapeau's presentation to the IOC, all of us were hooked. Only French-Canadians would drag out the charade the way Trudeau, Bourassa and Drapeau have."

"They're big on the diplomacy and the ceremonial but they just can't cut it in efficiency and business horsesense."

Those are almost "word for word" remarks from persons active and far from junior in both sport and federal circles. Of course, all Anglophones! Certainly, their tenor is not confined only to the Olympics. The animosity in Ottawa's English community towards bilingualism policies has been simmering for almost 10 years. There is an unwillingness in Anglophones to recognize that over on the other side it has seemed essential to the Prime Minister (and to Pearson before him) that he be able to show there are places, very important places, for French Canadians in the federal apparatus.

Trudeau, in particular, has appointed a number of French Canadians to key positions in the most important federal departments and agencies. What appraisal can one make of their worth in these posts? Can one generalize that French-Canadians "can't cut it" in posts of power?

JUNEAU

PICARD

. . . they're tops

No. You can't so generalize.

However there are those who sustain the image of the French-Canadian official as arrogant and extravagant, often casual about his responsibilities and far too conscious of his own importance.

On the other hand, one can go through many other French-Canadian appointments and compare them favorably with some English-Canadian ones. For example, Pierre Juneau of the CRTC has an unmatched rating for ability, integrity and sheer devotion of duty. He's a giant in every good way in some contrast to the Anglo whom he (in effect) succeeded.

Laurent Picard as head of the CBC has done amazingly well. He's had a few positive triumphs in that mind-boggling job but it is hard to find anyone in the CBC or any familiar outsiders who do not rate him far ahead of George Davidson who was before him.

Andre Raynauld, the head of the Economic Council of Canada, Pierre Taschereau, chairman of the CNR, Edgar Gallant, head of the NCC, Guy Sylvestre, head of the National Library and Marc Lapointe, head of the Canada Labor Relations Board, are other French Canadians who have been put in top posts and who (by all I hear) do their work as well as one is entitled to expect or better than their predecessors.

Then our electoral machinery in Canada has been in the hands of a succession of French Canadians over generations and been well-handled.

So . . . this is all a crude reminder. Don't equate Olympic troubles with French Canadian inadequacies. Like anyone else they have their excellent, good, fair, poor and very bad.

SOMEBODY IS BEHAVING LIKE AN APE

By DEREK MALCOLM
Manchester Guardian

Frederick Wiseman's latest documentary film, shot in an American animal research centre, is called Primate for a good reason. It is essentially about one set of primates who have power, using it against another who haven't. And if the title implies how near we are to the orang-outangs, gorillas, chimps, and rhesus monkeys we misuse, the film itself leaves us in no doubt as to the closeness of that relationship. One of its most profoundly disturbing elements is simply the likeness between torturer and tortured.

Wiseman's camera sees this and tacitly underlines it. The identification becomes at times almost intolerable. As a film maker he leaves both everything and nothing to chance. His studies of American institutions allow us religiously to make up our own minds about them.

Yet he assembles his material in such a way that our involvement has to be total. We cannot escape coming to some conclusion, and it is not necessarily the one we may suspect Wiseman holds. With a subject such as this, some will simply come to the conclusion that they have to leave the cinema. Even the banned Titicut Follies, his first film, made in a hospital for the criminally insane, was possibly easier to watch.

This central fact about Primate may lessen its potential audience but it can't affect its importance. It is a film that shouldn't be ignored just because it is acutely uncomfortable to sit through.

One of the chief horrors — worse, I think, than the scenes of anaesthetised vivisection and brain plumbing — is the extreme ordinariness of the participants and their often convincing justifications, right down to the statement that "all research is useful, even if it appears useless when it is being done." Can there be anything more terrifying than a kindly executioner? Wiseman found no Dr. Frankensteins during his apparently very amicable visit to the centre; just nice people adding to the sum of human knowledge by subtracting from the sum of humanity itself.

Perhaps the film is less proficient than some of its director's previous work at actually giving us the information we need to complete the argument. The purpose of the experiments is to control aggression and sexuality. But is it only for murderers and rapists, or for us all? And how successful is it likely to be? Wiseman's own insistence on the awful fantasy of normality, the argument that documentary film is really a form of surrealism, seems to have left his lawyer's mind less precise than usual.

Even so, the imagination does fly out of its box when confronted with his bizarre and paradoxical images of kindliness and terror. What kind of world is it that allows a tiny, terrified monkey to be fed, watered, and patted on the head before being strapped screaming into a revolving pressure chamber that simulates unaided space flight? And what kind of filmgoer is it who hates this more than if the subject of the experiment was an ugly rat?

It's How You Play the Game

RUSSELL BAKER

I went to the White House for a game of Economics with President Ford.

"You're going to love this game," he said. "It's more fun than anything since the Hi'Li."

He shuffled a stack of thousand-dollar bills, asked me to cut the stack, then dealt me one. I held it close to my chest and studied it. It was the real thing.

"What happens now, Mr. President?"

He grinned, "Now," he said, "it's up to you to guess what you're holding in your hand."

★ ★ ★

I paused a long while. Finally: "Could it be —?"

"Yes, yes, you're warm. Go on."

"Could it be a thousand dollar bill?"

The president leaped up with a delighted smile.

"Exactly!" he cried. "It is one of your very own thousand-dollar bills picked at random from the many you have sent to Washington. It is all yours."

I was delirious with joy. A thousand-dollar bill, and my very own. So General Thieu hadn't gotten all of them, after all.

Clutching it, I rose to go.

"Just a minute," said the president. "We haven't finished the game yet," and he produced a board and dice.

"Now I roll the dice," he explained, throwing a four and advancing four spaces on the board. "Take an Economist card," the space said.

He turned over a printed card. "Oil crisis," it said. "Impose an oil tax to cut dependence on Middle East oil."

"This is the fun part," said the president, picking up the telephone and imposing an oil tax.

"Can I take my thousand-dollar bill and go, now that the fun part is over?" I asked, knowing what the answer would be.

The president poked me lightly in the ribs, smiled.

"Always the wit," he said. "I like a fellow with a sense of humor."

"Do I get to throw the dice now?"

"No," said the president. "You get to take a Consequences card. Go ahead."

He picked up a pile of cards, examined them all and gave me one. "This will break you up," he grinned.

"Due to the recently imposed oil tax," it said. "The cost of warming your house has been increased by 50 per cent. Pay $250 for your fuel company to offset its tax increase."

★ ★ ★

I said I had better go pay the fuel company right away, but the president stopped me. "Since they will have to pay it back to the government anyhow," he said, "you can just give it to me."

He changed the thousand-dollar bill, gave me $750, and said, "Now you get an Inevitable News card," and handed me one.

"Congratulations on knowing it all along," said the card. "The government has authorized your electric company to charge you its share of the new oil tax. Pay your favorite utility $200."

The president said he might as well take the $200 to save the power company the bookkeeping nuisance.

"Now I bet I get to take a Believer in the American Dream Hah-Hah card," I said.

"You know something?" the president said. "You have a natural feel for this game."

★ ★ ★

"Some game, isn't it?" the president laughed.

"It sure is. But how do you get my last $250?" I asked.

The card said, "Due to the rising cost of transportation caused by the higher price of oil, the price of everything is increased. Surrender all money left in your bankroll."

I told the president I didn't think much of the game. "It's too obvious," I said. "No real surprises."

"That's what you think," he chuckled. "You get the surprise when you go outside and find all those higher prices you've just paid won't go down again."

"What's the surprise there?" I asked. "They never have gone down and I don't expect they ever will."

"Yes," laughed the president, "but what you don't realize is — next year I'm not going to give you an extra thousand dollars to pay them."

It was a scream, but to cheer me further the president pinned a button in my lapel. "Does it say WIN?" I asked.

"No," he chuckled. "It says SAP."

IMPERIAL OIL NET UP 28%

TORONTO (CP) — Imperial Oil Ltd. announced Thursday that its 1974 profits increased 28 per cent compared with 1973.

J. A. Armstrong, Imperial Oil chairman, said in a statement that earnings for the year ended Dec. 31 were estimated at $290 million, or $2.23 a share, compared with $228 million, or $1.76 a share, a year earlier.

At the same time income taxes increased 82 per cent to $226 million, and royalty payments to governments tripled to about $251 million.

He attributed the increased earnings mainly to crude oil and natural gas production and Imperial's chemicals operations.

Higher prices for petroleum products did not have a significant effect on earnings because of the offsetting impact of inflation and higher priced crule oil, he said.

Capital and exploration programs cost $404 million while another $113 million was required for the higher cost of inventories.

Boeing Predicts Fewer Working

SEATTLE (AP) — The Boeing Co., predicting a decline in the commercial airline market, said Thursday it might cut its employment in the Puget Sound area this year by from 3,000 to 8,000 jobs.

"There is little likelihood that commercial aircraft orders in 1975 will exceed those of 1974, which was a good year," the huge aerospace firm said in the company newspaper, Boeing News.

The firm has enough airplane orders to maintain the present level of production until September, a Boeing spokesman, Pete Bush, said. Layoffs probably will not begin until the fall, he added.

Q. I am a married man with wholly dependent parents living overseas. What exemption can I claim for my parents?

A. If your parents are dependent by reason of physical or mental infirmity, you may claim the actual amounts spent in support of them up to a maximum of $586 each. Form T1E-NR, which you can obtain from your District Taxation office, must be completed and atached to your income tax return.

Q. I am divorced and supporting an 18-year-old daughter who is attending university. She resides in my home only during vacation time. She had no income during the year. Can the equivalent to married exemption be claimed even though she does not reside with me during the whole year?

A. Yes. A dependent child who is attending school or university will be considered as having been supported in your self-contained domestic establishment.

Q. My nephew, aged 15, came to live with me last year when his parents were killed in an auto accident. Although I have not been appointed as his legal guardian, and no papers have been signed, he is totally dependent on me. Can I claim him as a dependant on my income tax form?

A. Yes. The fact that you have not been appointed his legal guardian would not bar you from claiming your nephew as a dependant if he otherwise qualified.

Q. My wife is working and will file her own tax return. I know I can't claim the married exemption on her behalf, but can I claim this on behalf of our child instead?

A. No. the exemption for support of a child may only be claimed by a person who is not married or, if married, is separated from and not supporting his wife.

Q. We had our first child last week. How do I go about having my tax deductions changed, or do I need to do anything?

A. A child will affect your personal exemption status. Whenever your personal exemptions change, notify your personnel office and they will have you fill out a new TD1 form. You should do this as soon as possible.

Time Runs Out for 'Cat', Police Bullets Kill Him

MONTREAL (CP) — Richard Blass, a 28-year-old escaped convict, died in a hail of police bullets early today.

Acting on a tip-off police surrounded a cottage where Blass was hiding out in Val David, a Laurentians ski area about 60 miles north of here, said a police spokesman.

Heavily-armed detectives from Quebec Provincial Police homicide and holdup squads, backed up by Montreal policemen, moved into position at about 5 a.m. EST and called upon Blass to surrender.

He replied with only a few gunshots before police opened fire.

Blass, known as the "Cat" because of his numerous escapes from prisons and penitentiaries, became a prime suspect in the worst mass killing in Canada's history Tuesday.

Ten men and three women died in the fire-charred storage room of the sleazy Gargantua nightclub, most of them asphyxiated in a fire which police said was deliberately set.

Blass, who had escaped with four other convicts from the maximum security wing of the St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary last October, had threatened "a bloodbath" if conditions in the prison were not improved.

He was later that month implicated in a double murder at the same Gargantua club where Tuesday's macabre deaths took place.

Two men were shot to death by two gunmen as they sat drinking at a table in the club.

Police speculated soon after Tuesday's grisly find that the fire deaths may have been an effort to eliminate possible witnesses to the October slayings. This possibility was later ruled out.

Blass' brother, Mario, was anxious to clear him of any involvement in the Gargantua fire deaths. Mario told a French-language newspaper Thursday: "My brother is not an angel but I am convinced he did not do that."

But police intensified their search for Richar Blass.

In January, 1969, Blass and three others were arrested after a 90-mile-an-hour chase from a holdup in which they exchanged 40 shots with police.

In October of that year Blass and eight other convicts escaped from a police yan taking them to the courthouse in Montreal. Shortly after that escape, Roger Levesque — one of the victims of the double murder in the Gargantua club last October — was charged with harboring Blass and two other convicts.

Last Nov. 5 Montreal lawyer Franklin Shoofey received a letter from Richard Blass and Roger Roussel — one of the men who had escaped from the St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary — saying they would "kill many people" unless newsmen were allowed to inspect Cell Block No. 1 at the penitentiary.

Leadership Not for Barrett

COCQUTLAM — British Columbia Premier Dave Barrett said Thursday he is not a candidate for the New Democratic Party's national leadership.

He said at a news conference he is "personally regretful" that the NDP's acting federal leader, Ed Broadbent, has declined to seek the leadership at a party convention to be held this summer.

Barrett called Broadbent a "fine parliamentarian," adding that he understands Broadbent's decision not to run.

"Politics is a very severe hardship on anyone's personal life at all levels: municipal, provincial and federal," Barrett said.

VANCOUVER — Dr. Scott Wallace, British Columbia Conservative party leader, said Thursday that if Premier Dave Barrett doesn't call an election before late next year, his party will run candidates in all 55 provincial ridings.

"If the election is not held until the fall of 1976, by God we'll run 55 candidates and we'll win," Dr. Wallace said to a group of 50 people at an area school.

Dr. Wallace is the only provincial Progressive Conservative MLA.

MIAMI — Cathy Kraft says she was walking her $150 poodle when a man leaped from a truck, grabbed the dog, killed it and tried to eat it — fur and all.

She identified the man as Leroy Tuff. At a preliminary hearing for Tuff Miss Kraft said she was walking the dog with her niece and nephew Jan. 8 when the man drove up in a truck and demanded: "Is that your dog?"

Then, she said, Tuff grabbed the dog's leash, dragged it into the truck, beat and strangled the animal and then tried to eat it, fur and all.

Dr. A. M. Castiello, a psychiatrist, said Tuff was mentally incompetent at the time of the attack, possibly due to a combination of painkiller pills and vodka.

LOS ANGELES — J. Paul Getty III, 19, grandson of oil billionaire J. Paul Getty, became a father this week.

Getty, kidnapped in 1973 while living in Rome with his mother, married Martine in Italy, and moved to California a month ago.

PARIS — President Valery Giscard d'Estaing dined at a picture framer's home Wednesday night in keeping with his promise to the French people about making social contacts at all levels, the Elysee Palace said Thursday.

The president and his wife squeezed into a tiny dining room of a three-room apartment with Claude Cucchiarini, 46, and 11 family members and friends.

They stayed until midnight, discussing everything from big game hunting to the cost of living—but mainly steering clear of politics.

NEWLYWEDS LETTER GETS AN ANSWER

SAN LEANDRO, Calif. (UPI) — Newlyweds Stig and Laurie Medby flipped a corked bottle in the Atlantic Ocean on their honeymoon cruise last summer. A half-year later, it brought them a congratulatory letter from France.

Medby, 24, said Thursday he and his bride said the bottle contained a note which included their names and the fact they were newlyweds.

"It was a novelty, something to do," Mrs. Medby, 22, said. "We were out in the middle of nowhere — it's something everyone thinks about doing. You see it all the time in the movies.

"If someone finds it, fantastic."

The bottle was found Dec. 8 in the Bay of Biscay by a French fisherman. He brought it home to Mont De Marsan and gave it to his son, Chantal Laboudigue, 13, who — after having it translated — wrote a reply to the Medbys.

— "I couldn't believe this — we didn't expect it at all," Mrs. Medby said. She said she and her husband planned to visit Chantal when they make their next trip to Europe.

SOUR NOTE AS BANDS PHASED OUT

OTTAWA (CP) — A sour note has appeared in the Armed Forces progress toward normality.

As a cost-saving gesture, the regular force bands at Kingston, Ont., Gagetown, N.B., Calgary and Montreal, appear to be on the way out.

Defence Minister James Richardson doesn't like the idea and he is looking for other ways to save money.

But, under plans announced last week by J. A. Dextraze, chief of defence staff, the bands are gradually on the way out, at a saving of about $2.5 million a year.

The cut to five from nine bands means that there will be one regular forces band in each region of the country. There also are 66 reserve bands and 39 authorized volunteer bands — those formed by members of the regular forces — which receive some financial assistance from the defence department.

The five bans to disappear are the Air Transqport Command Band in Kingston, the Royal Canadian Regiment band in Gagetown, the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry band in Calgary and the Royal Canadian Artillery band in Montreal.

Left will be the Canadian Forces Stadacona band in Halifax, La Musique du Royal 22e Regiment of Quebec City, the Canadian Forces central band in Ottawa, Training Command band in Winnipeg and the Canadian Forces Naden band in Esquimalt, B.C.

The band establishment will be reduced to 305 persons from 465. The defence department says that that does not mean all the bandsmen in the four bands being dropped will have to leave.

All bandsmen in the country will be asked what they want to do and some, who have been in the forces for 25 years, are expected to take early retirement.

Bandsmen also could seek other work in the forces. The elimination of the five bands is one of several moves the forces are expected to be making in the next while as they reduce establishment to fit a 3,000-person cut in manpower.

Transport 'Mess' Blamed on CTC

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Disband the Canadian Transport Commission as a major step toward clearing up the "mess" in transport policy and the department, was the advice given Transport Minister Jean Marchand Thursday in the commons.

Marchand agreed there could be "better co-ordination" between his department and the powerful government agency headed by former finance minister Edgar Benson.

A former minister of transport, George Hees, who held down that job during the Diefenbaker government, offered the word of advice to his successor in the difficult and demanding post of trying to administer the huge sprawling department.

Marchand has become the target of concentrated fire from the official opposition. His attempts to preside over the large department recognized as one of the most difficult jobs in the cabinet — have brought jeers and jibes down on his head from the Tories.

He has admitted more than once that transportation policies in Canada "are in a mess." He reiterated that confession Wednesday and said he was working on the preparation of a new over all policy.

His question: "Is the government considering disbanding the Canadian Transport Commission, because this provides a divided jurisdiction within the department which makes it impossible for the minister to carry out the job that he has to do?"

Only by returning to the administration of the minister the operations now under the CTC, giving the government direction over these matters once again, could order be brought out of chaos, said Hees.

There were howls of protest from Liberal backbenchers.

But Marchand listened attentively to Hees and said the matter was under review.

NEW DEPUTY MINISTER of consumer and corporate affairs is Sylvia Ostry, Canada's chief statistician. Prime Minister Trudeau's office announced the appointment of Ostry, 47, Thursday. She will replace Michael Pitfield, recently appointed Privy Council Clerk.

PM Mum on Button

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — "That's the trouble with ladies — they bitch after the fact."

That was Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's reaction to criticism from within his own caucus of the button endorsed by Health Minister Marc Lalonde to support International Women's Year.

The prime minister refused to say Thursday why he isn't wearing the button, bearing the slogan "Why Not," although one was given to him in person by Lalonde at a special ceremony.

Neither would he answer when asked if he agrees with two female Liberal MP's, Simma Holt (Vancouver Kingsway) and Iona Campagnolo (Skeena), that the button is "degrading" and "sexist."

Instead, he invited the reporter questioning him to ask two female members of the press gallery standing nearby. After hearing their criticism of the slogan, he turned to his legislative assistant, Joyce Fairbairn, and asked her why she hadn't stopped approval of the button. She replied that when she looked into it, it was too late.

It was then that Trudeau made his observation about "ladies," as Miss Fairbairn pulled him away from reporters.

The two female MP's from B.C. disclosed Wednesday that they were trying to dissuade their colleagues from wearing the button which has been criticized as having a sexual connotation. It was produced by an all-male public relations firm in Toronto.

Thursday in the Commons only two buttons could be seen from the press gallery, on the lapels of Agriculture Minister Gene Whelan and Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Alastair Gillespie.

Lalonde's parliamentary secretary, Coline Campbell, South Western Nova, wasn't wearing her button either, but she claimed she had just given it away to someone else.

Shutout Saves the Day

Thursday was a good-news, bad-news day for Victoria Cougars.

A medical report and league president Ed Chynoweth of Saskatoon were responsible for the gloom.

Ginnell, set down for three games, also was fined $1,000. The sentences, among the stiffest dealt by Chynoweth since he took over as president, were the result of brawls in Winnipeg and Brandon earlier in the week.

Chynoweth said Ginnell showed little or no control over his team in last Monday's game in Winnipeg. The fine was the result of Ginnell's deportment in Brandon the following night when he was ejected by referee Murray Harding.

Chynoweth warned that if the fine is not paid cy 5 p.m. Tuesday, Victoria's scheduled game with Kamloops Chiefs in Memorial Arena that evening will be cancelled.

Chynoweth also suspended Eric Sanderson, Kim Clackson and Lorry Gloeckner. Sanderson drew an indefinite suspension for taking a match penalty at Brandon, apparently for throwing a helmet at a rival.

Clackson will sit out six games, three for "starting a fight" in Winnipeg and three for "an unprovoked attack" on a Brandon player.

Gloeckner was suspended one game, which he served Thursday, for coming off the bench to take part in a fight.

Chynoweth also suspended coach Murray McPherson and defenceman Jerry Rollins, both of Winnipeg, for three games each. Another Winnipeg player, Darryl Sutton, was set down for one game.

To top off Cougars' gloomy day, the team lost the services of defenceman Gord Roberts for about six weeks. Thte starry youngster suffered a broken thumb Monday but played Tuesday.

A strong performance by Leslie and a three-man defence helped Cougars to their shutout. Rick LaPointe and Tim Williams were the only regular defencemen available for Thursday's game but Rick Peter made it three by moving back from the wing.

Williams scored two goals while Mel Bridgman, Dan Lucas, Greg Miazga and Jim Gustafson added singles.

In other games Thursday, Don Murdoch scored three goals to boost his league-leading total to 54 as Medicine Hat Tigers edged Kamloops 6-3 and Brandon shaded New Westminster Bruins 2-1.

Stags Find New Home

BALTIMORE (AP) — After two earlier attempts failed, a financially troubled World Hockey Association team has finally landed in Baltimore.

WHA and city officials said Thursday the league will shift Michigan Stags from Detroit to Baltimore, wherethe y will become the Blades.

In Detroit, the Stags were plagued by poor crowds and high operating expenses in Detroit.

The team will play its first game as the Blades in Cleveland Saturday, Murphy said. Three road games later, they will play their Baltimore opener Feb. 2 against Houston Aeros.

The Blades replace Baltimore Clippers, an American Hockey League club that represented the city for 13 years. Zanvyl Krieger, the Clippers' board chairman, announced earlier Thursday that the AHL club had folded.

WHA president Dennis Murphy said the league was talking to several private groups who might operate the Blades next season. He said a new ownership group should be ready by the end of the current campaign.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the AHL said league officials would meet today and discuss the remainder of the schedule. The last time a team dropped out of the AHL in midseason, the spokesman said, the entire AHL schedule for the remainder of that year was revised.

Duncan: Flashback In Community Spirit

DUNCAN — I'm not sure if everyone is familiar with the curling story on Vancouver Island, or not, and the place this little town played in it. Because if Duncan wasn't No. 1 in the beginning, it wasn't far behind Nanaimo. That's where the first curling rink on the Island was constructed.

Duncan popped in behind, with Port Alberni third, by three days, and Victoria bringing up the rear.

Of course that was 23 years ago and a lot of rocks have slipped through the rings since then. Now, of course, there are rinks all over the place, others being built, more curlers than ever, but still Duncan lives on as the legend of small-town B.C. and what community spirit can do. And did, back then.

Maybe the story bears repeating.

It all started with an advertisement, I'm told, in the Cow- Larry Marshall, then a curling buff, now just a spectator in Larry Marshall, then a curling buff, now j ust a spectator in Victoria, not Duncan where he was a merchant then.

At any rate, 31 people showed up at the meeting called for the express purpose of discussing the building of a curling rink and the Cowichan Cooperative Curling Association was born. A Floyd Moorman purchased the first share. Frank Middlemiss was the first president.

People must have been happier then because there were a lot of hi-jinks associated with the project which had its beginning on Feb. 12. Victoria was involved too as the Victoria Curling Club was then being constructed, and so a challenge was put forth and accepted.

Marshall had made the initial move wagering that Duncan could beat Victoria and the late Eric Bullock, then building superintendent and later to be club secretary-manager of Victoria was quick to take up the dare.

And the deal was that whoever lost would wheel the other down his main street in a barrow suitably decorated for the occasion. Bullock did the wheeling and Marshall enjoyed it and a big cigar too.

"He should have known better," said Marshall.

It was a gala event — there were drill teams, dancing to the Hometowners, a stick-fighting demonstration by the Sikhs of Mesachie Lake, and even Robert Strachan then an ordinary MLA was on hand.

Even Ralph Pashley was impressed. The former radio critic, commentator, hot liner, you name it, called it "a roaring fire of community effort in the city of Duncan."

Maybe it's been forgotten, too, but Duncan also had the Island's first Little League program. Sonny Bruce who had watched kids using blocks of wood for bases, appealed to Wilf Cain, who appealed to the community, lumber and labor was donated, and that's simply how Little League came into being.

Oh, the curling rink has moved since the first ice surface was opened, which took place just 71 days after the inaugural meeting. It's now up on Sherman Road and has turned out some good ones in its history.

★ ★ ★

The family name, of course, is Harper. Father Ron won the first bonspiel in the spring of '53. Don Murray, William Wadsworth and W. J. Weyman were on that rink.

Since then son Glen has carried on the family tradition and has been to two Briers and two national mixed championships. Which isn't bad and a record not many can match either.

Gordie Stewart is another who has hit the national championship trail, being an Island rep in the Legion title event and not that far out of it in the Consols in the past few years.

There are many famous names to recall — Shorty Berkey, Harv Hodge (now with Jack Trueman in Victoria) Gary Merrett, the Wilsons, Vi and By; Verne Kaspick, Murdie Robertson, Ed Mould, Ralph Fulford, Vera James Charlie Strouldger . . . and many more. The list of those who contributed much is too long to recall or repeat.

So tonight this is the venue of the 1975 Island Consols, leading as it does to the B.C. championship and then the Brier. Two out of the eight rinks will go on to Vancouver and the Pacific Coast playdowns. And for those, and even the losers, it's a certainty that their efforts and their skills will be appreciated.

Because Duncan is like that. In curling, it has been that way for about 23 years too.

SKATING WAS DIFFICULT chore for some of smaller players taking part in annual Victoria "Minor Hockey Night" program Thursday at Memorial Arena. These pup division players were not making much use of skates while providing entertainment for fans. Young players on teams ranging from pup to junior age divisions, took part in almost eight hours of exhibition contests.

John's Still Under Par But He's Not the Leader

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Johnny Miller was in an unfamiliar position trailing the leaders after Thursday's opening round in the $185,000 Bing Crosby golf tournament.

He was five strokes behind Hubert Green and Larry Ziegler who had 66s. Miller had a 71.

It was the first time in this season's nine rounds that Miller had failed to lead or share the lead. It was his first round in the 70s.

The record-setting winner of the Phoenix and Tucson opens had to work hard to salvage his one-under-par.

"I'm OK," said Miller. "I kept my subpar string intact. I want to see how long I can keep it going."

Jack Nicklaus also had a 71.

Miller, Nicklaus and Green all played Cypress Point, the shortest and probably the easiest of the three par-72 courses being used. Ziegler was at Spyglass Hill.

Two strokes back of the leaders were Ross Randall, Andy North and veteran Gene Littler, tied at 68. Randall and North played Cypress, Littler was at Spyglass.

A 69 by Cesar Sanudo was the low score at Pebble Beach, the seaside court that will serve as the site for the final round Sunday. Sanudo was tied with Jerry McGee, at Cypress Point, and Tom Watson, at Spyglass.

VISITING SCOTS BOW TO VICTORIA CURLERS

Victoria curlers won three out of five matches against Scottish opponents Thursday at Victoria Curling Club to keep Canada out in front in the annual competition for the Strathcona Cup.

Canada now has a 6-4 edge in wins and a 95-72 lead in points for the 15-event series which started Wednesday in Calgary and moves to Vancouver tonight. The remainder of the competition will be in Eastern Canada.

Victoria's victories were recorded by Harvey Mossop, who downed Ron Dagg 16-4; Howie Ward, who nipped Norman Brown, 8-7; and Gordon Walker, who defeated Jim Whiteford, 13-7.

Canadians Win

With Reg Wonnenberg doing an oustanding job in goal, James Bay Athletic Association Canadians topped Stockers North Americans 7-4 in a South Island Big Six Hockey League game at Pearkes Arena.

AROUND OUR SHORES
pat dufour

Taking in the Seattle Boat Show, which ends Saturday, is to know how Eve must have felt when she was cajoled into taking a bite of that forbidden apple.

To shop American is a heck of a temptation when you see the newest on the boating scene, but realize the whopping four-way taxes we get slapped with by our governments make the price tag almost as tough as the one Eve paid.

Take, as an example, a 30-foot boat that sells in Washington for $20,000. First, our customs people take 25 per cent of that — $5,000. Then there's another $3,000 for the 12 per cent federal sales tax, plus an additional $2,800 for the federal government's new excise tax.

When the federal people are through with you, the provincial government hits you with a five per cent sales tax. By the time you're through, you're paying $32,340, a massive 62 per cent more than your American buddy a few miles away.

Even a second-hand bargain can become no bargain at all by the time the customs people are through with you.

If you pick up a 50-foot wreck for $5,000, intending to bring her back to her former glory, the where-with-all to do it gets whittled away if the customs turn around and slap a $45,000 value on her. That $11,250 you've just lost could have gone a long way toward gussying your dream boat.

The new 10 per cent excise tax, a bitter pill to the Canadian boat industry that's already hard-pressed to remain competitive, could lead to hanky-panky on the part of some boat importers.

One importer who asked to remain anonymous — he didn't want any trouble with the customs people — said the temptation now is to bring in boats — minus engines — and avoid paying the tax by saying they will be fitted out with engines less powerful than the 20 horsepower-and-up ones on which the new tax is levied.

Taxes and inflation have thrown a real whammy at boat importers. Take, as an example, the Swedish Albion line, well-liked locally because of the excellent craftsmanship. About four years ago you could get a basic Albion 25 for around $14,000. Now the sturdy little power boat will probably cost you between $22,000 and $23,000.

The company's popular Vega 27 is now up to between $22,000 and $23,000. At that price, by the time you have her rigged for racing, the smile on your friendly banker's face may start to chill.

When you have an American-class boat built in Canada, it's always maddening to pick up a magazine and find her American sisters sell way below what you paid.

Here again, you're being penalized with hidden duties on the equipment, engines and other items that go into the fitting of the boat.

The toughest thing to take, however, is to have to pay more for a Canadian boat — such as one of the popular C and C line — because our American friends don't get slapped with the same onerous tax burden.

It's small wonder that more and more people are going overseas to shop for bargains, staying out of the country long enough to avoid the heavy tax load.

With a national unemployment rate pushing seven per cent it's high time politicians took a close look at what they're doing to our boating industry.

It's also time they realized the boaters of today are, in the main, working stiffs and not Sir Thomas Lipton and the millionaires of yesterday.

One enigma that has visitors to the Seattle show confused is the way in which Americans carefully observe the lowered highway speed limits, and the apparent unconcern over an energy crisis shown by the increased number of large fuel-guzzling boats at the show.

And, while we're still smarting at the way in which Canadians must pay more for their boating pleasures, it doesn't help to know it's going to cost $2.50 to see the Vancouver boat show, which begins Feb. 21, while entrance to the Seattle show is $2.

Buccaneers led 3-1 after the first period, but Nixons came back to take a 5-4 lead going into the final 20 minutes.

Pratt Had It Figured

Times News Services

Vancouver Canucks broke their nine-game winless streak in the National Hockey League when defenceman Tracy Pratt correctly figured out what it would take to win Thursday's game in Washington.

"The way the goalies were playing," Pratt said, "you figured it was going to take a lucky goal."

Defenceman Ab DeMarco scored Vancouver's second goal and helped set up the first by Greg Boddy to spoil a strong goaltending display by Washington's Ron Low.

Elsewhere, Los Angeles Kings responded to their third straight sellout — and only their eighth since joining the NHL in 1967 — by trouncing Toronto Maple Leafs 6-0.

It was the biggest win margin of the season for Kings, who now have won eight of their last nine games.

But the Kings couldn't shake Montreal Canadiens. One point behind the leading Kings in the Norris Division, Montreal kept pace by beating Minnesota North Stars 7-0.

The surprise on Thursday's eight-game schedule was Kansas City Scouts' 3-2 win over the Bruins in Boston.

In other games, New York Rangers defeated Atlanta Flames 5-2, Philadelphia Flyers won their fifth straight by clipping St. Louis Blues 7-2 and Buffalo Sabres whipped Detroit Red Wings 5-1.

Sooke Pair Exemplifies Dedication to Project

Some rambling notes along the trail:

Dedication plus . . . That's a tag that can be applied easily to Bill Jams and Jack Brooks, of Sooke, two of the people involved in the Amalgamated Conservation Society (ACS) coho hatching project in Goldstream River and Mary Vine Creek . . . When a recent freshet broke a pipe leading to the incubation box on Mary Vine, a tributary of Sooke River, these two labored in the downpour from 2 to 4 a.m. to make the necessary repairs . . . Meanwhile, the eggs are developing normally and have "eyed" . . . This means they have survived their most delicate period of growth . . . It also brings the ACS aim of producing 50,000 fry from each of the boxes that much closer to fruition . . . To date, the organization has only spent about $700 of the $1,600 grant received from the provincial department of recreation and conservation . . . Another bonus from a volunteer effort.

★ ★ ★

Bob Harris was elected president of the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association during the annual general meeting Monday . . . Other officers are Bob Lindsay, vice-president; Bill Varcoe, first vice-president; Don Jacobs, secretary; Rich Ward, treasurer. and Bob Warburton, membership chairman . . . The member-of-the-year award was switched to include everyone who served on the committee in charge of developing the new club grounds near the top of the Malahat — Gary Williams, Walt Zozula, Bob Raincock, Archie Van Buskirk and Lindsay . . . Varcoe collected the President's Award for doing outstanding work during the past year . . . And a special award went to Brian Roberts for service to the club over many years . . . Officers also announced that a $300 bursary has been set up in the name of Howard English . . . A membership drive is now on and anyone interested in taking part will find the benefits far exceed the price tag of $10 a year ($15 family and $2 junior).

★ ★ ★

South Vancouver Island Rangers have scheduled a prize and practice trap shoot for scattergunners starting at 10 a.m. Sunday . . . The club grounds are located along Luxton Road, off either Happy Valley or Sooke Roads.

★ ★ ★

Karl Leong topped the Chinook Club's monthly Frostbite Derby last Sunday with a 4:12-pounder . . . Garry Vaughan was second (4:02) and Mel Lohr was third (3:00) . . . All three salmon were caught in the Finlayson Arm of Saanich Inlet.

Plans for construction of a second chairlift and a new T-bar on Forbidden Plateau were announced recently by the Mount Becher Ski Development Society . . . The new chair will have a vertical rise of 510 feet over a slope length of 2,875 feet and is expected to cost upwards of $250,000 . . . Capacity of the new chair is 1,200 skiers per hour, the same as the existing lift . . . The new "T" will cost about $100,000 with a rise of 180 feet over 1,600 feet and a capacity of 900 skiers an hour . . . Both additions will open up the longest runs in the vicinity . . . Here's to the end of those 20-minute lift lineups!

★ ★ ★

Two sportsmen from the East Kootenays, Jim Wright of Invermere and Rene Spocchi of Radium Hot Springs. will collect a $200 award from the B.C. Wildlife Federation for their aid in bringing an illegal hunter to justice . . . The investigative efforts of the two men and the information they supplied led to the conviction of Achin Purschwitz for possession of game during a closed season . . . He was fined $100 and had his hunting privileges suspended for one year . . . Wright and Spocchi gave up a total of almost five days of their time, observing the accused, making statements and appearing in court . . .

★ ★ ★

Winter chinook fishing has been good off the Victoria waterfront, Oak Bay, Sooke, Saanich Inlet, Cowichan Bay, Sansum Narrows, Comox wharf, Shelter Bay and Duncan Bay . . . Crofton waters are yielding some excellent blueback

Sisters Must Leave By the End of April

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Five plaintiffs, including Mother Cecilia, 85, have lost their court battle to gain control of the Society of the Love of Jesus at Langford and its assets estimated at $1.5 million.

The judgment handed down by B.C. Supreme Court Judge Harry McKay in Vancouver Thursday ends an internal dispute within the Roman Catholic religious society which has simmered and flared for years.

It confirms that the plaintiffs, Cecilia, founder and former prioress at St. Mary's Priory, and former sisters Mary Agnes Eaton, Mary Josephine Donoval, Mary Lucy Forde and Mary Julia Kelly, were properly dismissed as religious sisters by the church and therefore cannot be society members.

It also confirms Sister Leonette Hoesing, the present prioress and main target of the plaintiffs, as properly elected and holding office.

McKay's judgment gives the three former sisters, Eaton, Donovan and Forde, to the end of April to move from the Priory building they have refused to leave in recent years.

The trio staged a "sit-in" at the Priory from March to October of 1973 which at one stage had both factions hiring security guards.

The other two pliantiffs, Cecilia and Kelly, operate the Good Shepherd Animal Shelter at Mill Bay and have not lived at the Priory for years.

McKay's judgment, which has harsh words for the plaintiffs, followed a four-week trial in Victoria last fall.

The five former sisters, represented by Hugh McMillan, sought a declaration they were the only society members in good standing and entitled to control

The society, represented by Cecil Branson and Patrick Bion, disputed that position and counter-claimed the plaintiffs were no longer society members.

Mother Cecilia founded the society in Vancouver more than 50 years ago and led its members into the Roman Catholic Church in 1937.

In his judgment McKay said:

"... it is clear that from the very first the hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church had great difficulty in dealing with Mother Cecilia.

"She has been for some years a law unto herself and found it difficult to comply with the lawful orders of her superiors ... She was, to put it mildly, a most difficult lady to deal with.

"She attracted from the sisters under her a remarkable degree of loyalty, particularly as she coud be quite ruthless and verbally cruel in her dealings with them."

In part of his review of events, he said: "... notwithstanding the excellent work being done by the sisters it is clear the Order remained dissenstion-riddled."

Of her later work with care of animal waifs, McKay said:

"The work has received mixed reactions from the public and has proved to be somewhat of an embarrassement to the Catholic Church as it is associated in the public's mind with the work."

The judgment describes the plaintiffs' attacks on Mother Hoesing as "plain rubbish."

The plaintiffs argued throught the court case that the present prioress "was engaged in a diabolical scheme to destroy the defendant society and turn over the assets of the society to the Roman Catholic Church.

"The submission is plain rubbish and has no basis in fact.

"The evidence is clear that throughout the years of her stewardship she has wanted nothing more than to return to the tranquility of her community in Yankton.

"She has worked under intolerable conditions to try to bring peace and stability ... a weaker and less dedicated person would have washed her hands of the whole mess years ago."

The judge agreed Mother Hoesing has been the victim of the "cult of the foundress" (Mother Cecilia) and of the reluctance of the church to take stern measures against Cecilia and the other plaintiffs.

McKay said in his judgment that it is obvious Sister Mary Agnes (Eaton) "was a good part of the over-all problem."

The three sisters living at the priory (Eaton, Donovan and Forde) proceeded in recent years "to make life miserable for everyone around them. They were openly defiant of the prioress and did all they could to disrupt community life."

During the trial the plaintiffs described activities, including encounter sessions and mixed group meetings in the priory which they took exception to.

"The allegation of orgies within the priory is without foundation," the judgment said.

And later: "This allegation was, to my mind, both vicious and irresponsible. As one can readily imagine the press had a field day with this titillating allegation."

He dismissed the plaintiffs' case as "without merit" but said he is certain the society will see they are adequately cared for in recognition of many years of valuable service given the society.

'PRIORY DISGRACED'

Mother Cecilia Mary Dodd, 86, internationally-known champion of animal waifs, has won many a battle over the past half-century.

She lost one in B.C. Supreme Court Thursday.

Asked to comment on the judgment which confirms she has been dismissed from the Roman Catholic Church and from Langford's Society of the Love of Jesus, she said today she hadn't approved of going to court in the first place.

"I never want to see the priory again. It's been disgraced."

She said she was not interested in the court case "except to feel sorry for the three sisters at the priory."

Asked if she would invite them to live with her at the Mill Bay animal shelter, she said: "No, they'll find a place for themselves."

It Could Bring New Hospital

The hospital at St. Mary's Priory in Langford will likely soon be turned over to a public agency, clearing the way for long-delayed hospital development in the area.

There are indications the Society of the Love of Jesus, which operates a 95-bed extended care hospital there, had only been awaiting Thursday's favorable B.C. Supreme Court ruling before giving up operation of the hospital.

Plans for expansion of the hospital, or its replacement on the gounds, have been in the wind for several years. They have always been postponed until the question of legal control of the society was settled.

"It's been our understanding that they'd like to get out of the extended care hospital business," Art Young, chairman of the regional hospital board, said today.

"Previous discussions indicated the society was even willing to donate the property to the Capital Regional District."

If the shelved plans develop along the lines of earlier talks, the hospital will likely be operated by the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society, a public society which now operates Glengarry and Mount Tolmie extended care hospitals.

Passes Offered Reporters

In the event of a strike by city outside workers passes will be offered to reporters so the union will know which reporters are going in to City Hall, the president of Local 50, Canadian Union of Public Employees said today.

Jim Walker said the passes will not be given to individual radio stations or newspapers but to the particular reporters who normally cover city news.

"It's up to the reporter, if he's going in, he'll go in; if he asks for a pass, that's OK, and some won't cross anyway," he said.

Fast Lockout Move Planned by Region

Lockout notice will be served and mediation officer Clark Gilmour will be asked to withdraw as soon as there is a single strike against any municipality, Capital Regional District board chairman, Jim Campbell, said today.

He commented after a mediation meeting Thursday with the Capital Regional District and Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 388. No date was set for a second mediation meeting, he said.

City outside workers, members of CUPE Local 50, received formal acknowledgement today that Gilmour's report has been filed and they are free to strike.

Local 50 president Jim Walker said several executive meetings have been arranged between today and Sunday at which a decision could be made on when a strike will start.

Gilmour remains the mediation officer in contract disputes involving the regional district, city inside staff, Greater Victoria Schoolboard, Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Sidney. No lockout can occur until he withdraws and until 72-hour lockout notice is served.

Campbell said there will not be a lockout until these legal procedures are cleared.

But, he added, "we will ask the mediation officer to file his report and serve lockout notice as soon as there is a strike."

Greater Victoria school board janitors, custodians and tradesmen, members of CUPE Local 382, were involved in a mediation meeting today. They have posted strike notice but cannot act until Gilmour withdraws.

The city outside workers have turned down an offer of 15.76 per cent wage increase for this year. This would amount to 70 cents an hour on their base rate of $4.42.

They want parity with Port Alberni municipal workers who received a 91 cents an hour increase on a base rate of $4.49, plus cost-of-living increases and a dental plan which have not been offered in Victoria.

The Regional Bargaining Group made up of Greater Victoria local government employers have rejected parity with Port Alberni.

Walker, meanwhile, was sending a letter to Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen today asking the mayor to intervene personally in negotiations.

"The public interest demands we make all efforts to avert a strike and that means that the mayor of the city become personally involved in the negotiations," he said.

"We're only asking for a fair wage for our members. Right now they're being paid much below the average in private industry and below other public servants in the province. They are in fact subsidizing the administration of the city of Victoria with their low wages. That has to end."

Pollen said that the Regional Bargaining Group already has its official spokesman in lawyer E. E. Pearlman, the bargaining voice," but if it would help the situation the mayor said he would be ready to take a direct part in negotiations.

Pollen was speaking without having seen the CUPE letter, but he said in any case he had a meeting arranged later today with Walker for what he said was "a friendly; conciliatory chat."

FIVE-MAN B.C. Hydro crew works on moving power poles lining Finlayson between Cook and Quadra to one side of road as preliminary to long-delayed and controversial widening of street, which will provide two traffic lanes and one parking lane. But widening work could be delayed still further if threatened strike of city employees takes place.

Rover's Beach Stroll Out

Inspector Don Adams of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals today warned residents not to walk their dogs on beaches in the Dallas Road area.

An oil slick has settled in the area west of Clover Point, reaching around to McNeill Bay in Oak Bay, he said.

The slick was first reported to Adams last Friday. He spent all day in a boat Sunday, rescuing oil-smeared birds. About 24 birds have been treated since then.

Adams said the oil, a mixture of bunker fuel and diesel, probably came from a passing ship that was washing out her bilges.

It has now settled on rocks on the shoreline.

If a dog gets contaminated with oil, Adams said a veterinarian has advised the oil be wiped off after being smeared with margarine and the dog cleansed with Johnson's baby shampoo.

A minor oil spill also took place in Esquimalt Harbor Thursday.

The weathership Quadra spilled 50 gallons of bunker fuel when a valve jammed while the ship was fuelling and transferring ballast.

The spill was quickly contained in a boom set up by a crew, headed by Cmdr. Peter Birch-Jones, the Queen's harbor master.

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

More children enter high school each year without a solid grounding in the three R's, Greater Victoria trustees were told Thursday.

"Increasing numbers of students are entering the junior highs who do not seem to have the basic requirements in reading and mathematics," said the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association in a brief presented to a special committee meeting of the school board.

The teachers' request for more remedial help to deal with this problem was only one of a number of requests for better learning conditions presented to the committee.

It was, however, the problem that prompted greatest trustee concern.

Schools today offer so many options, said Janet Baird, that they "take away time spent on reading, writing and computation."

"What we're doing now is producing children at the end of Grade 12 who can't go on to a job", because of weakness in maths and reading, she said.

"We've cheated them," she added. "We've put in too many extras and not really given them what they need."

Trustee Peter Bunn marvelled that the board was spending more than $1,000 a year on each pupil, yet "we end up with youngsters going into junior high school with real problems in reading and writing."

Even some students graduating from Grade 12 are unable to read well enough, Bunn said.

"We've got some incredibly ineffective youngsters who are accepted by the university with open arms and immediately put into remedial classes."

The program has been running eight years and Prof. Grant McOrmand said today he's not aware of any decline in the ability of students taking the test.

Vic Thompson, head of curriculum for Greater Victoria School District, said today he has been aware of the growing problem, particularly with youngsters who can't read well.

"It's a problem with a minority of students, but it's an increasing minority," he said.

Thompson said part of the problem is that children today spend so much of their spare time watching television.

"They reach junior high not having spent the hours reading they used to," he said.

Junior high schools used not to have learning assistance teachers, he said. Now they do, and working mainly on reading problems.

Mavis DeGirolamo, president of the teachers' association, told trustees it was an oversimplification to say that schools should just concentrate on the three R's.

In today's world teachers must be concerned with more than the three basics, she said.

Win Littleton, chairman of the high school section of the GVTA's learning conditions committee, said the problem of lack of basic skills is an international one.

Solving it will require far more research than the GVTA is capable of doing, she said.

$4,000 TAKEN IN HOLDUP

Two men brandishing revolvers and wearing stockings over their heads held up a Victoria supermarket employee Thursday night and escaped with more than $4,000.

Victoria city police said Robert Andrew Arnold, an employee of Wilson's Warehouse Food Market, 47 Songhees, had just left the store after closing at 9 p.m. and was about to get into his truck when he noticed the front tire was flat.

Suddenly two men appeared over a bank leading down to the Inner Harbor and demanded the night deposit bag he was carrying.

"No one will get hurt if you do as we say," one of the men said.

They told him to give them his car keys and then go over the bank and not look around.

Arnold did as they said.

The men threw the keys down to him but they fell among rocks and he was unable to find them.

Staff Sgt. Angus Stewart said Arnold sat on a rock and waited for about five minutes afraid to move.

When he was sure the pair had fled he called police.

Stewart said about half the deposit was cash, half cheques.

Ask The Times

Q. I have a problem. There are geographic north and south poles on the earth; and there are magnetic north and south poles on the earth too. Some books say the geographic north pole and the magnetic north pole are on the same side of the equator, while others say they are on opposite sides of the equator. Can you quote official references to prove to me which of the above sayings is correct? S.L.

A. According to the World Book, both geographic and magnetic north poles are north of the equator. The geographic pole lies near the center of the arctic Ocean at the point where all the earth's lines of longitude meet.

The magnetic pole, the point toward which north-seeking compass needles point, can move many miles in a few years. In 1970, it was located near Bathurst Island in northern Canada.

Regained at Need, a Distant Paradise

PARADISE IS NEVER entirely lost. A man if he's lucky retains a few times and places into which he can escape when the present bears too harshly upon him. One of mine is a point of land that dips to a cove, climbs a knobbly brown hill, and reaches on past a deserted powder-works to the many-islanded Gulf. For a boy with all August in his hand, it was heaven unspoiled and complete.

I retreated to Powder Point for a while last week, when a prowling virus of the January horde sank its claws in me. It condemned me to the boredom of a darkened room with sore eyes and a grinding headache for company. Win read to me when she could take time from her busy day. But I couldn't read for myself, or watch television, and any attempt to put words on paper whipped the headache from a jog to a gallop.

A man out of love with his present and robbed of the energy to contemplate his future still has the past. So I returned to that pocket paradise not visited even in memory for many years.

The way to the point led across wide low-tide flats seamed with salt-water guts and tongued with salt grass. To a scrawny kid turned loose to wander, those flats were a wonderland in themselves.

The intertidal life with which they teemed gave them a voice of their own — a soft, continuing murmur sensed as much as heard. Sometimes their shallow pools that lay like dropped fragments of sky prisoned schools of shiner perch left behind by the ebb.

There were oysters on the flats, the little native Olympics so rarely seen today. There were clams and cockles for the taking, and monstrous bivalves called geoducks that poked hosepipe siphons from outer bars exposed only by the lowest tidefalls.

The moving hump under a shiny-green eelgrass blanket might be a warrior crab 10 inches across the shell, with ivory-tipped pincers at the ready. Always in sight was that most patient of fishermen, the great blue heron.

To a boy on this undulating plain, his feet in comfortably soaked running shoes and his plunder in a wet gunny sack, the point seemed distant. Then of a sudden it lifted close ahead, with seaweed tangled in the lowest boughs of its flanking arbutus trees.

A black-earth path ambled up from the beach. It paused at a concrete cistern, spring-fed, in which lived an alder-manic trout on no account to be jigged or tickled from his basin.

In the house lived a retired Welsh professor with the heart of a boy. His tartly-kind wife indulged him through a succession of inventions that refused to function and experiments that rarely succeeded. The professor owned a single-shot .22 caliber rifle with which he campaigned against the hawk that raided his wife's chickens.

One day he lay on his back for an hour in the grass, watching the hawk wheel its circles and while he calculated bullet velocity and trajectory, intersecting courses and other such abstruse matters. Then he raised the little rifle, waited his mathematically-exact moment, and dropped the hawk from the sky.

It had been a purely academic demonstration with never a thought for the end result. Shocked, the professor gaped at ruined splendor brought to earth. He vowed he would never again shoot any living creature. Then, failing once more to take probable consequence into account, he set rifle and cartridges in my hands.

The little single-shot gave paradise a new dimension. It was my companion, and a comfort on the dim road from the plateau where the professor's wife had once scatted a cougar with such no-nonsense authority that it hightailed for other parts.

There was the hidden cove tucked into the shoulder of Powder Hill, where a boy with a jury-rigged raft and seaworms for bait could fish as in an aquarium.

Out along the terrace at the base of the hill were ledges with rockfish and big black cod deep below. And a venturesome journey beyond the hill lay the powder-works half-shattered and deserted after a mighty blast of years gone by.

Once, long after, I tried to return to the point by car. But the road I remembered was out of bounds, kept so not by an Edenesque angel with flaming sword but by a bored guard with a carbine across his knees.

Still, this lost paradise served its purpose, and has done so again in a miserable week now over. My eyes are better, my headache has gone, and it's time to trade past for this welcome, flu-free present.

Abby Says Idea Worth Sleeping On

DEAR ABBY: I have a wonderful idea, but I need your help. We should go back to God's laws, so I thought up the idea of having the Ten Commandments printed on bedsheets and pillow cases.

If all the people who are shoplifting were to see "Thou shalt not steal" printed on their bedsheets every night, they would quit stealing.

Also, people need to be reminded that it is a sin to kill, and to commit adultery, and to covet another man's wife. They forget that it's God's law to honor their mothers and fathers, and to remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy. If we had the Ten Commandments printed on bedsheets and pillow cases, it could change the world.

I wrote to two manufacturers of bed linen, and even sent them a sample sheet that I made up myself, and they both turned me down flat.

What do you think of my idea? — GREAT IDEA IN WASHINGTON

DEAR GREAT: Send me a sample, and I'll sleep on it.

DEAR ABBY: Why is it considered the wife's responsibility to take care of all the social obligations? SHE has to acknowledge all the gifts with thank-you notes. And if she doesn't do it, THEY don't have bad manners, SHE does.

SHE is expected to remember all the birthdays, weddings, anniversaries, graduations, etc. on both sides of the family. She also has to do all the Christmas shopping for her family and his.

The fact that the husband "works" supposedly excuses him from all other obligations — even buying a birthday card for his own mother. Today many wives are also working full-time outside the home, but this isn't an acceptable excuse for them.

If you can explain this to me, Abby, you are a genius. — A WOMAN, NATURALLY

DEAR WOMAN: I'm no genius, but I'll try: The notion that all the social obligations should be handled by the wife is a carry-over from the days when the wife stayed home and took care of the kids, the kitchen, the correspondence and the Chrstmas list.

Today, when so many women contribute financially to the support of the family, I think their husbands should assume their fair share of the social obligations.

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, a friend of mine came to me for financial help. He had gotten a girl in trouble (he was a family man) and needed $500 for an abortion.

I gave him the cash. When he got his next paycheck he gave me $50 toward the debt. Then he had some more hard luck. One of his teen-aged kids was in a car accident and had to spend five months in a hospital. The bills were unbelievable, so he couldn't pay anything on what he owed me.

Then my friend got sick, had surgery, and he was terminal. Thank God he went fast.

I don't know why, but I told my wife this man owed me $450, but I never told her what for. Now she's after me to collect the debt from his widow, who got some good insurance benefits.

I had no note, but my word would be good with his widow. But what if she asks me what it was for? — EL CENTRO

DEAR EL: I don't know what your financial situation is, but unless you are desperate for the $450, forget it, and charge it to friendship.

DEAR ABBY: I read in your column that the Number One complaint of wives is, "My husband doesn't appreciate me."

Well, my husband must be an exception because he never leaves the table without saying, "Thanks for dinner, honey."

Gerald phones me from work every day just to ask how things are going with our five sons and me. He reminds me often that he loves me, and he never fails to tell me I look nice when I do.

I could fill a book with his good points, and couldn't even fill a page with his bad points.

We just celebrated our 12th wedding anniversary, and this was the best. They keep getting better every year, Abby.

I know this won't make your column because you have so many more important letters to print, but I just had to let you know that there's a wife in Monroe, N.Y. whose husband really does appreciate her. — Maureen Haran.

DEAR MAUREEN: I think it's important to let people know that there are good marriages, too, so accept my belated anniversary congratulations. And take good care of Gerald. He sounds like a prince. And you must be a pretty special wife to deserve such royal treatment.

DEAR ABBY: How well I remember post office! It was a lot of fun for the popular, good-looking boys, but not for the not-so-good-looking. The one time I was called into the "post office," a girl said he had a "letter" for Chub. My heart was all aflutter. She put her arms around me and said, "Oh, I forgot to stamp it." Then she brought her foot down hard on my left foot and crushed two toes. — CHAB MUNGER, Helena, Montana.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is it really possible to hypnotize animals? Besides the human animal, I mean—L.L.

DEAR L.L.: Yes. Animals of many species may be hypnotized, though the degree of hypnotic response will vary among individuals of the same species (as with humans). Further, the relationship between the physical and emotional factors of hypnosis will vary according to the animal's position in the evolutionary scale. Animal hypnosis is induced by various procedures which place the animal in an unnatural situation, inducing immobility and altering its ability to interact (communicate) with its environment.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I'm against castration for birth control. So is my boyfriend. I just read where they're soon going to be vaccinating men so they'll be sterile. My boyfriend said he'd go along with this (he's against any kind of surgery, even the vasectomy). How about a vaccination for Dingo? He' sjust a puppy so he doesn't need it yet, but will they be having vaccinations for male dogs in time to help him, too?—W.R.

DEAR W.R.: Vaccinating Dingo to achieve sterility just might be considered a "help", at least when compared with castration. Unfortunately, this technique isn't going to be available for him (or your boyfriend either) for some time yet. There are several different developing approaches for vaccination of the male to achieve sterility but none of these methods will be commercially available quite that soon.

DEAR DR. MILLER: It's happening again, just like it did last year. Our cat, Hank, started to chew on his back just in front of his tail. Now he's got all the hair off of there. The skin looks sore. It sure looks dumb. Why does this happen to him every year?—F.Y.

DEAR F.Y.: The lower back area is a common site for skin problems. Frequently in the cat (dog, too) this is a form of allergic dermatitis and frequently fleas are the culprit. Hank's hair coat should be checked out thoroughly for fleas. Eliminating any fleas is step one. Be sure to use a flea product intended for use on cats. If the problem persists, or if there were no fleas found initially, Hank's doctor would want to check out other possibilities and should initiate therapy to give Hank relief and prevent further damage.

DEAR DR. MILLER: One of our arguments concerns whether an animal will eat what's good for it if it only has a chance to. It will, won't it?—K.B.

DEAR K.B.: Unfortunately not. Many foods which are appealing to a particular species, and which it may soon learn to prefer, may be nutritionally inadequate or even toxic. Dogs frequently prefer an (inadequte) all meat menu. Cats, if givent he option, often latch onto liver or red meat tuna, both of which are not only nutritionally inadequate, but many, in quantity, prove toxic. Wild pets or zoo animals if given the opportunity will quickly learn to prefer unbalanced rations including many which can cause dangerous digestive disturbances.

In their natural habitat, wild animals tend to "eat what's good for them." less out of instinct than out of necessity. They eat what they are capable of eating and what is available. This generally, within the cycle of the seasons, provides proper nutrition. A monkey might prefer fruit. If fruit were available on a year-round basis, the monkey wouldn't eat leaves, shoots, insects and other forms of animal protein which it requires for a balanced diet. Countless well-meaning pet owners delude themselves into thinking they are feeding their animals adequately because they are feeding what the pet prefers. Their pet's less-than-perfect wild instincts have been completely corrupted by civilization so that most pets given a wide choice of foods, would actually pick a diet which was nutritionally inadequate.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Shorty, our Great Dane, has a lot of trouble with dirty teeth —tartar. I've been advised to brush his teeth. No way he'll let me. Any other suggestions? — D.C.

DEAR D.C.: Since Shorty prefers to do it himself, the harder his food (within reason, and providing it's nutritious) the healthier and cleaner his teeth and gums will be. Dry dog kibble, then, is obviously superior to a mushy meal or canned food from the standpoint of a clean mouth. If Shorty insists on soft food, following the meal with a hard dog biscuit is helpful. Dog biscuits given all day long are less desirable since they may themselves occasionally leave residue to accelerate tartar formation. Bones do a good job of cleaning the teeth, but even a Great Dane may have trouble digesting them on occasion so it's safer to stick to the nylon variety.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Did you say turkey was bad for pets and, if so, why?—W.B.

DEAR W.B.: Turkey bones are definitely dangerous for both cats and dogs. Even turkey skin which has been super-spiced and dried to a leathery consistency by baking can cause potentially serious digestive problems in dogs or cats who do not have a robust digestive tract. But fowl flesh (turkey, chicken or others) is in fact, an excellent food for felines and canines.

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By Dr. WILLIAM WELCH

It used to be that ordinary obstetricians. Their patients loved them and every time they sent one of these patients to the hospital, she went home gaily with the happy result of her labor. Gynecologists shared in this general glow of affection. We used to say that obstretics-and-gynecology was the happy specialty.

But not any more. The Women's Liberation movement has changed all that. It seems that the happy glow was all a mirage.

Gynecologists and obstetricians are unbearbly paternalistic. sexist, elitist, chauvinistic (whatever that may mean in such a context), will not communicate, will not put up with rooming-in, natural childbirth and breast-feeding, take an old-fashioned, pious attitude toward premarital sex, do not begin to understand lesbian relationships, insist on prescribing without explaining and, in general, outrage their patients and demean them beyond bearing.

Now these are criticisms that have been levelled at doctors in general, and I have no doubt in many cases there is some justice in such complaints. It is an incontrovertible fact that there are lots of doctors, like lots of people, who just do not communicate well with anyone. And if you do not communicate well. or at least listen well, and you are a doctor, you are going to have a lot of dissatisfied patients or ex-patients.

All of which has very little to do with being what we seem to be required to call "sexist." The difference between men and women, the venerable French insistence on the desirability of which having been duly acknowledged, in the relationship between men doctors and their women patients has most certainly been taken for granted in ways which many women find uncongenial, if not demeaning.

It is a poorly kept secret that doctors' shoptalk is replete with clinches that label mothers as "complaining," young women as "cute chicks" or "demanding and bitchy." Some of us are a little too inclined to first-name our women patients in a condescending father-child manner and slur over explanations as if they were beyond the understanding of fragile minds.

The more serious objectives of the militant feminists are less readily put into focus. These have to do with displacing the doctor by women counsellors who will perform breast and "internal" examinations, Pap smears, pregnancy tests, tests of gonorrhea and instruct women in "know your body" courses.

Nurse midwives, medical technicians and self-taught "paraprofessionals" are judged by the feminists to be more sympathetic, more informative and more attuned to women's special problems. It is felt that they lend a kind of communal dignity to such encounters which doctors have failed to provide and women sorely need.

The enthusiasts consign the doctor to the role of technician whose expertise will be available when needed, but he will no longer be the central figure. All of which may prove to be a humbling experience for the erstwhile father figure.

But those doctors who do not feel threatened by this backing-away may very well move into the situation with a new, more sympathetic attitude, acknowledging their past failures and making an effort to mend their ways.

They may even come to agree with the late Emma Goldman, a turn of the century feminist, who with her fist upraised announced to her cheering peers, "Women need not always keep their mouths shut and their wombs open."

MD Switches Own Diet After U.K. Experiment

WINNIPEG (CP) — Refined foods may be a major contributing factor to heart and gall-bladder diseases, the Canadian Society for Clinical Investigation was told this week.

Dr. Pomare of Victoria Hospital in London, Ont., said a recently-completed study he worked on in Bristol, England, found that normal diets supplemented with unprocessed wheat bran reduced the level of cholesterol in the bile.

Gallstones are formed in the gall bladder mostly from cholesterol in the bile, the liquid secreted from the liver into the intestines to facilitate elimination.

Dr. Pomare said bran and whole-wheat foods may have a place in preventing or even treating gallstones.

An estimated 50,000 to 75,000 gall-bladder operations are performed in Canada each year at a cost of millions of dollars to the health-care system.

Dr. Pomare, who switched to a high-fibre diet himself following the experiments, also said the study shows that cholesterol levels in the blood decreased for persons who ate less-refined diets.

High levels of cholesterol or fatty acids in the blood apparently cause narrowing of the arteries and are considered a major contributor to heart disease.

However, Dr. Pomare said that sugar in the diet may be just as important a cause of gallstone formation and more studies are needed to determine exactly why persons in affluent countries are so likely to have high cholesterol levels in their bile or blood.

He said the mechanism whereby high-fibre diets reduce cholesterol levels is exceedingly complex and not well understood.

The subjects in the Bristol study ate ordinary diets which were supplemented daily with about one cup or 50 grams of unprocessed wheat bran.

Dr. Pomare said supermarket products such as Kellogg's All-Bran are partly refined. Completely unrefined cereals are usually available only in health food stores.

The size of the fibre particles may be important in the process of controlling cholesterol levels, so that partial processing or even grinding may destroy the cereals' effectiveness, he said.

On another subject, medical researcher J. G. Mongeau of Montreal said studies in that city showed heredity is "100 per cent responsible" for the blood pressure in children up to the age of six.

Beyond that age, environmental factors such as lifestyle and stress apparently play a significant, but minor role in subsequent blood-pressure performance, he said.

Amateurs Outshine Pros

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Volunteer probation workers have a better rate of success than professionals, says Phylip Davies, Vancouver-area co-ordinator for the British Columbia corrections branch.

Davies said in an interview that in a North Vancouver program, begun four years ago, volunteers were paired with adult or juvenile probationers and asked to become "probation officers with a case load of one."

The volunteers were better than the professionals at keeping the probationers out of trouble, he said.

"In one survey, the professionals had a 40-per-cent success rate and the volunteers had an 80-per-cent success," he said.

"Volunteers do not replace staff," he said. "In fact, we have to hire more staff to manage volunteer programs."

IS THIS X-RAY REALLY NECESSARY?

As a radiation physicist, I wondered why my dentist took bite-wing X-rays of my whole family every six months. So I asked how much radiation we were receiving. He became very, very angry. He said if I was planning on using that information to decide whether I was going to have a dental X-ray, I could find a new dentist. I got a new dentist.

Dr. Priscilla Laws, Associate Professor of Physics Dickinson College.

WASHINGTON (WP) — Is this x-ray necessary?

Patients should start asking their doctors and dentists the question, for until they do the medical professions will continue making scant progress against excess radiation, Ralph Nader's Health Research Group maintained in a recent report.

In a new "consumer's guide to avoiding unnecessary radiation" — a guide written mainly by Dr. Patricia Laws, a Pennsylvania physicist who got angry when her dentist wouldn't answer the question —the Health Group said that:

—Despite many past exposes, more than half the total diagnostic X-ray dose Americans receive is unnecessary. Both too many X-rays and unnecessarily high doses are to blame.

—More than nine X-rays in 10 are done without protective shielding for patients. In more than half the X-ray beam is broader than needed.

—One out of five X-ray machines inspected by state officials in 1972 were not in compliance with laws seeking to minimize unneeded radiation.

—Thirty per cent of all X-rays are not medically justified, and are done to protect doctors from malpractice suits.

The last charge comes from a study by two Massachusetts Institue of Technology graduate students, a radiologist and lawyer. The others come from federal and state studies.

The result may be as many as 1,000 deaths a year from cancer and genetic damage caused by excess X-raying, said Laws and Dr. Sidney Wolfe, health group director.

What can a patient do?

The new guide suggests that you:

—Ask practitioners both what kind of X-rays they plan, and whether they are taking precautions to shield sex organs and other areas.

—If they refuse to discuss the subject, go elsewhere. "There are doctors and dentists who treat patients with respect," Laws said.

—Ask if it is possible to use other recent X-rays instead of taking new ones. Too many doctors, said Laws, automatically say, "Why not shoot new ones?"

—Keep a personal radiation record—a sheet of paper with dates, doctors' names, types of exams and estimated whole body and gonadal doses—so doctors will know what others have done, and not repeat unnecessarily.

—Tell your doctor if you think you may be pregnant, or even might become pregnant within three months. X-rays that expose a ripening egg, developing embryo or fetus should never be taken unless absolutely necessary.

—Question any dentist who insists on X-rays every six months unless you have many cavities or continuing problems.

—Ask how new the X-ray machine is. The newest minimize exposures.

—Even if you are asked to hold a child to be X-rayed, ask for a lead apron — and a lead shield for the child's sex organs unless it will interfere with the information needed.

These are only a few of many suggestions in the guide, available from the Health Research Group, 2000 P St. NW., Washington 20036.

Sagittarius can laugh with Aquarius, tell tall stories with Scorpio, earn money with Capricorn, be attracted to Aries, form legal alliance with Gemini and go into business with Virgo. April should be a most important month in 1975 for Sagittarius. Generally, this year will feature greater security, consolidation, a digging in, establishment of position — and a brighter money picture.

Forecast for Saturday, Jan. 25, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Specifics dominate — activity occurs in area where decisions are made, policies set. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio figure prominently. What was built in past is tested. Wish contracted could be looked at in different light. Be ready for some startling changes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Study Aries message for valid hint. Be ready for change of scene. Dig deep for information — examine motives. Accent is on short trip, message, enhanced ability to communicate. You are due to get vital message across in dynamic manner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): What seemed a "sure thing" may now be viewed with somewhat more skepticism. Now you should refine and define; this is the time to see minus rose-colored glasses. Cycle is such that you can land on feet amid applause — and vindication.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Now you understand what has to be done — but what you do about it becomes the major question. Relative who seems disagreeable may be suffering from indigestion. Peek behind the scenes. Discern reasons, motives. Capricorn, Cancer are probably involved.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What starts out as a "pleasure" could eventually have a price tag. Now is time to get rid of what is superflous. Aries, Libra could figure prominently. Friend who makes promises may not be in position to deliver. Know it and be ready for surprise.

LABRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You get action on proposals. Means it is important — more so than usual — to say what you mean and mean what you say. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently. One "at top" is intrigued with your potential. Financial question has yet to be decided.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You see beyond what is apparent — your ESP provides stimulation — and some valid answers. Aquarian cou;d play significant role. You gain access to files, programs, unique notes. A quick trip could be on agenda.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Highlight ideas, movement, versatility. You will be dealing with active people. Accent will be on consummating deals which involve other people's money as well as your own assets. Gemini figures prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Contracts, agreements, public relations, special cooperative arrangements are likely to be featured. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons play paramount roles. Older family member tests your patience. Ride with the tide! Be aware of details, loopholes and fine print.

CAVEAT EMPTOR

Colorful Names for Dirty Tricks

By LYNNE GORDON

Every business, every profession, every movement usually develops its own descriptive language, its own "buzz" words that are only understood by the inner circle.

Strangely enough the same thing is happening in the consumer field. The stronger the movement becomes, the more colorful its language. Words or phrases like bait-'n-switch, con man, fly-by-night operator, the high ball, the low-ball, the step-up, graphically describe many of the tricks and phoney pitches used in today's marketplace.

The Con Man

First, let me remind you that the con man, the hustler or the fly-by-night operator may have changed his image over the years but his techniques are almost the same as they were in the days of the medicine men and snake oil pedlars. Perhaps he doesn't look as flashy, doesn't sport the flashy diamond ring or roll a fat cigar. Usually, not always, he's more conservatively dressed, more soft spoken.

But the con man still thinks of you (the victim) in such unflattering terms as the mooch, the mark, the tip. If he has a deal for you that sounds too good to be true . . . you better believe it probably is. I'll wager my bottom dollar that there's always a real hook, if you also get into something, without careful comparison shopping, because you are offered a "free" gift.

Bait-'N-Switch

The technique of BAIT-'N-SWITCH is used by many hustlers as well as "legitimate" businessmen.

Let me tell you how to recognize this shady technique.

First, you'll read, see or hear an advertisement about a fantastic buy of some product or service, for an unbelievably low price. You might even get a flyer slipped into your mailbox or under your door. The unbelievable bargain can relate to a number of areas . . . such as carpets, freezers, appliances, television repairs, swimming pools, home improvements, driveway paving. The list is endless, but the technique is the same.

It sounds good to you and in all good faith you go to the store or allow a hot-shot salesman into your home. Now that's the BAIT . . . the low price. It's easy to recognize the bait?

Try to buy the product or service at the advertised low price. In the trade they say "it's nailed to the floor." The salesman never intended to sell it. But once he has you in the store, or he gets in your home, he will pressure you to "switch" to higher priced merchandise. He'll give you all the corny reasons for not being able to buy the low-priced product. Such as: "We are all out of stock." "It doesn't come in the size, quantity or colors you want." "The merchandise is too shoddy for someone like you, you have better taste."

Once you recognize this unscrupulous pitch . . . WALK OUT. The salesman has a bundle of other tricks he can use.

Low-Ball

The LOW-BALL can be used when someone wants to sell you a service or product and gives you an unrealistic, low estimate to get your business.

But once they have you on the hook, they will sting you with a higher price. This can happen in such areas as moving, buying a car or car repairs. The most important thing is NEVER ACCEPT ANY "estimate" or low price until you have comparison shopped. Then, before you sign, make sure its written into the contract.

In reverse, the HIGH-BALL can happen when someone, let's say a car dealer, can offer you a high price for your trade-in. Then, at the time of delivery when he has you all psyched for your deal, he will re-appraise the price he gave you for the trade-in and offer a lower price. He is allowed to do this, if the contract contains that option.

Fly-By-Night

These sharks are called FLY-BY-NIGHT because that is exactly what they usually do . . . fly-by-night with your money.

Watch out for the door-to-door salesman or itinerant seller who shows up in your neighborhood and promises to deliver something in the future . . . all he wants is a deposit. After collecting hundreds of small deposits . . . he disappears. Or if they actually perform a service — like re-surfacing your driveway, fixing your chimney, installing aluminum windows — you won't be able to find them if the work was inferior.

Always make sure you check out the reputation and actual place of business of the salesman before you turn over hard-earned cash. Don't be satisfied with just a phone number.

Also, if you do sign, almost every province has some provision for a cooling off period. Depending on the area you live, it could be from 48 hours to 10 days.

These are just a few of the terms and descriptive phrases used by consumer journalists. Learn them, spot the phoney techniques yourself and you'll find you will have more confidence in the marketplace and can take care of yourself anywhere in the world.

Biological Clock Being Adjusted

TULSA, Oka. (UPI) — A five-year-old girl watches with wide-eyed excitement as the world celebrates the dawn of the 21st century — and 100 years later remembers that moment as she sees her great-great-grandchild help usher in the 22nd century.

There is nothing particularly unusual about the scenerio, for the children of the last decade of this century, and their decendants will, in all probability, belong to a race of centenarians.

Medical science has brought us to the edge of that achievement already, but those who are leading the research in aging are increasingly asking themselves what the sociological implications of extended life will be.

"The most important question in gerontology is what are the goals of our research," said Dr. Leonard Hayflick, professor of medical microbiology at Stanford's University School of Medicine and one of North America's leading researchers in aging.

"If it is to extend human longevity, then one must, as a responsible scientist, worry about the social consequences. Is it desirable to have everyone live an additional 10 or 20 years, even if you could stretch the life expectancy in such a way that they would not be spending that additional time as an old person?

"The social consquences are enormous and unless we come to grips with those first, it is probably unwise to tamper with the biological clock."

The biological clock is the key to research into increasing life expectancy. But Hayflick was quick to point out in an interview that there is a difference between life expectancy and life span. The latter, controlled by the biological clock, appears to be relatively fixed.

"If you cured all of the diseases that you know about, longevity would not be affected significantly. Aging is a programmed series of events, just as your development as an infant through adolescence and adulthood are all programmed.

TOTS' CONTACT LENSES GOOD ENOUGH TO EAT

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Henry P. Brent of the Hospital for Sick Children says soft contact lenses for babies have advantages but there is one problem — the lenses sometimes get lost.

"We wonder if they've eaten them," Dr. Brent said in an interview.

If that is the problem, the only damage would be to the parents' pocketbook. The doctor said soft contact lenses do not harm babies.

Dr. Brent supervises a contact lens clinic held weekly at the hospital. Many children who attend the clinic have had cataracts removed while others have had different vision strengths in each eye.

Dr. Brent said infants as young as six months can be fitted with soft contact lenses and the soft lenses accustom children to wearing a lens.

"If they need a hard lens later for better vision they accept it more readily," the doctor said. Most children can handle lenses by the time they are five or six years old.

Melissa Brown, three, has been wearing contact lenses for almost two years. She had a cataract removed at the hospital before she was two years old.

"To be effective, contact lenses must be fitted early," Dr. Brent said.

Another patient, Janine Willie, four, of Toronto, had a cataract removed in British Columbia when she was six months old.

As far as her doctors know, she is the only living person born with a cataract in one eye who has developed full vision in that eye.

"When they came here, Janine was too young to have had her vision tested," Dr. Brent said. When he tested the eye, he was surprised to find its sight was normal.

MD Calls for All-Out Attack On Weighty Canadian Problem

WINNIPEG (CP) — Doctors have done such a poor job treating fat patients that they should turn the job over to other health workers such as nurses, therapists, and psychologists, Dr. Charles Hollenberg, chairman of the University of Toronto department of medicine, said Thursday.

Doctors are too busy with other diseases, know too little about nutrition and quickly lose interest in treating obese patients who don't seem to get any better, he said.

Doctors should restrict their treatment to the complications of obesity, such as high blood pressure, high levels of fatty acids and sugars in the blood and diabetes, said Dr. Hollenberg, who gave the annual Royal College lecture on the subject.

He said overweight people are extremely difficult to treat because of their reluctance to follow exercise or diet regimes.

Since obesity is a major problem in society, and is associated with the epidemic of coronary heart disease, more resources should be funnelled into treating it, including the establishment of regional weight reduction centres staffed with nutritionists and psychiatrists, he said.

Dr. Hollenberg, physician-in-chief at Toronto General Hospital, said the intestinal bypass operation, in which a section of the intestine is removed to reduce a patient's ability to absorb calories, is still dangerous.

The operation has a mortality rate of about five per cent, almost as high as some open-heart surgical procedures, and also has a high rate of complications.

Dr. Hollenberg questioned the theory that certain people have a tendancy to obesity because they were overfed in the first few years of life. He said evidence was still too sketchy to draw this conclusion.

He also said existing weight-reduction programs have such limited success that fewer than 10 per cent of subjects maintain weight losses for any substantial length of time.

He said commercial ventures such as Take Off Weight Sensibly (TOPS) and Weight Watchers are successful to some extent with a program which exerts "extreme peer pressure" on subjects to abide by their weight-reduction programs.

LONGER SKIRTS STILL ON RISE

ROME (UPI) — Longer skirts are still in the ascendancy but two Italian designers are offering women the option of wearing a mini once in a while.

Both Heinz Riva and Tita rossi showed several mini-length outfits Tuesday in their high fashion collections for next spring and summer.

But they played it safer than Halston, whose clinging mini dress called "the shrink" fell flat in New York last fall.

The Riva and Rossia versions were mostly mini-pants rather than skirts. They followed this season's bulky lines and they came with an optional coverup.

Riva's minis, shaped rather like culottes, went under blousy, belted tunics and lightweight wool coats that covered the knee. The sleeves were as interesting as the length very full and hanging loose to the elbow or below like a Philippine folk dress.

For evening he showed a sheer dark green chiffon mini dress with the same big sleeves and a three-tiered, long-striped skirt to wrap over the mini.

Rossi's talented new designer, Cuban-born Manolo Verde, put boxy cuffed "walking pants" and gathered print blouses under lightweight wool coats and bloomers under a long wrap-around dirndl skirt of matching chiffon. A scarf was knotted to one side for a gypsy-style belt.

All his daytime clothes and some for evening were combinations of navy blue and white with very blousy tops gathered from yokes that sometimes fell over the shoulders. The skirts were fitted over the hips, of accordion pleats or almost straight. The models wore severe straw fedoras.

For evening he exploded into extravagant gypsy costumes in yards and yards of printed georgette or the tucks and ruffles of a flamenco dancer's dress.

Researcher's Tests Show 'Lefty' Not Born That Way

NEW YORK (NYT) — Experiments with mice have led a geneticist to conclude that left- or right-handedness, or pawedness, is not inherited but is instead determined by environmental influences. Although the conclusion applies chiefly to mice, the scientists said he strongly suspected the same was true of human beings.

If the researcher's opinion is correct, it would mean that most people are right-handed not because of an inherited tendency but because the world is largely set up to favor righthanders and because most children grow up emulating their parents, 90 per cent of whom are right-handed.

Although, like human children, mice are born without apparent hand, or paw, preference, mice normally develop a handedness that can be discerned by watching the animal, especially when it is feeding. As with human beings, it has generally been assumed that the preference arose as inherited traits began to express themselves during development of the nervous system.

Now, however, Dr. Robert L. Collins of the Jackson Laboratory, a private medical genetics research centre in Bar Harbor, Me., believes his experiments support a different conclusion. His report appears in a report issue of Science magazine.

The findings were based on observations of hundreds of genetically identical inheritances; half the mice were found to be right-handed and half left-handed.

By using younger mice that had not yet developed paw preference, Collins found he could determine the outcome in the vast majority of cases by altering the architecture of their cages.

The cages were constructed so that food could be obtained only by reaching into an opening in a cage wall. In one cage the opening was in a corner next to the right-hand wall so that it would be inconvenient to reach with the left paw.

When the experiment was repeated with the food opening against the opposite wall, 90 per cent became left-handers. With the opening mounted in the middle of a wall, so that it was not inconvenient to reach in with either paw, half the mice became left-handed and half right-handed.

"I have to conclude that genes play very little role in handedness, certainly in mice and, I suspect, in human beings," Collins said in a telephone interview.

Collins, who specializes in psychology and genetics, said he knew of no reason to believe that handedness should be determined differently in mice and men.

In every experiment designed to introduce an environmental bias for handedness in one direction or the other, a consistent 10 per cent of the mice developed a preference in the unfavored direction. About the same proportion of human beings are left-handed.

Collins said he was unable to account for this phenomenon.

The researcher, who has been investigating the origins of handedness for 10 years, said he suspects that children learn a hand preference because they emulate their parents. He said he has an experiment in progress to see whether baby mice follow their parents in paw preference. Preliminary results, Collins said, suggest that they do.

Chemainus Study A Waste: Mayor

NORTH COWICHAN — Acting Mayor Dennis Hogan said Thursday a new study of the Chemainus River urged by B.C. Liberal leader David Anderson would serve little purpose.

"I think they have all the material they need now," said Hogan in reference to fisheries department examination of the upper river, about nine miles of the stream above a proposed water storage dam.

The Chemainus River Action Group, B.C. Wildlife Federation and others oppose the dam — expected to cost more than $4 million — on grounds that it would destroy the steelhead fishery.

They point to a recent federal study indicating groundwater wells could supply the municipality indefinitely at much less cost than building a reservoir.

Gunman 'Welcome Anytime'

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — George and Donna Field, whose eldest son Robert was held hostage for 34 hours by a gunman, say they know the man so well they once considered adopting him and still would welcome him to their home.

The man, Donald Wayne Cline, 22, was captured early Thursday after seeking refuge in a London townhouse. Bobby, 12, had been released unharmed shortly before.

Cline was remanded Thursday on a charge of armed robbery and will appear today for a bail hearing in Woodstock, Ont.

"I'm sorry Wayne got caught. I didn't want him to go to jail or anything," Bobby said.

"At least if he was shot he wouldn't have to go through what he'll have to face now."

Mrs. Field, 32, said she has known Cline for 16 years and he has been a frequent visitor at the Field home since October.

Field said he and his wife did not know he was a fugitive because Cline had said he was free on probation.

The Fields considered adopting Cline shortly after they were married 16 years ago because the boy was from a broken home, Mrs. Field said. But the plan was abandoned because of legal complications.

George and Marie Field welcome Bobby home

Pipeline Hearing May 5

WASHINGTON (CP) — The U.S. Federal Power Commission (FPC) has set May 5 as the opening date for public hearings to consider Alaska natural gas pipeline proposals involving the expenditure of billions of dollars.

The FPC, in an announcement Thursday, said the meetings here will consider two main — and competing — applications simultaneously:

—The proposal by El Paso Alaska Co. to build a $6-billion "all-American" pipeline and tanker system; —An $800-million application by Alaskan Arctic Natural Gas for a pipe across Alaska to link up with a yet-to-be-approved Canadian Pipeline South — $7-billion project.

Also to be considered at the public hearings are three proposals for connecting systems.

'76 Games Firm, Bourassa Says

QUEBEC (CP)—The national assembly's municipal affairs committee adjourned Thursday with assurances that the 1976 summer games will take place.

While the committee still has to finish analysing the financial situation Tuesday and come up with any firm recommendations, it looks as if Mayor Jean Drapeau will probably have his stadium.

Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa said at the end of Thursday's session, "I think I can say in the name of the committee that these discussions have not put in question the holding of the games in July 1976.

"I think that decision has been made. It will be respected. There is a question simply of the way the games will occur.

"It should be clearly expressed for international public opinion that the games will take place."

Later in a statement, the premier said, "The games will take place in adequate installations which will meet the requirements of the international sports federations.

"We are fully confident that the installations will be ready on time, that is to say for the month of July 1976."

All members of the national assembly committee agreed to make Bourassa's motion unanimous.

This flew in the face of evidence presented before the committee that the difference between forecasted income and expenditure could be at least as high as $250 million.

"It's as if you owned a chicken and you want to buy a house," the mayor explained to newsmen.

"You sell the eggs the chicken lays to get the money to buy a house. But after you buy the house, you still have the chicken and it's still laying eggs."

To the suggestion by reporters that chickens have a limited life span the mayor said, "that's your opinion."

Magnuson Bill Requires Double-Hulled Tankers

Times News Services

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Senator Warren Magnuson (Dem.-Wash.) introduced legislation Thursday which would require all new tankers built to carry oil in bulk to ports on internal waters or straits of the United States to be constructed with double bottoms.

The bill is an amendment to the Ports and Waterways Safety Act of 1972 — a law which resulted from a Magnuson bill introduced in 1971.

A double bottom is an additional layer of steel between the water and the cargo. It is intended to prevent the puncture of cargo tanks in the event that a vessel suffers a grounding.

"This bill, if adopted, will greatly increase the protection of Puget Sound if an oil tanker should run aground in the waters of western Washington," Magnuson said.

The bill is similar to an amendment which Sen. Magnuson added to last year's Energy Security Transportation Act, later vetoed by President Ford.

In introducing the legislation, Magnuson sai da Coast Guard study shows that if a segregated ballast-double bottom system were fitted on new vessels, operational pollution from those vessels would be reduced 95 per cent, accidental pollution 35 per cent and total pollution 67 per cent.

"Groundings are one of the principal causes of tanker oil spillage," Magnuson said. "Twenty-five per cent of the pollution accidents worldwide studied by the Coast Guard, which resulted in the spillage of 250,000 tons of oil from 1969 to 1973, were the result of the groundings."

Magnuson also claimed that "early information" about the million-gallon oil spill from the tanker Showa Maru in the Straits of Malacca on Jan. 5 "indicates that a double bottom might have been effective in either preventing or reducing the amount of oil outflow."

ESCAPERS' CASE HELD TO JAN. 30

NANAIMO (CP)—Preliminary hearing for three men accused of escaping lawful custody here Nov. 27 was adjourned Thursday to Jan. 30.

Provincial court judge Jack Caldwell refused comment on any aspect of the case, on which there has been a no-publication order, but said the adjournment was ordered to allow time for one of the defence lawyers to prepare his submission.

Charged are Richard Dale Beeman, 23, Robert Myse, 25, and Claire Wilson, 19. They were charged with three counts of attempted murder, escaping lawful custody, unlawful seizure and assault causing bodily harm.

The charges were laid after three prisoners under escort to Vancouver escaped from sheriff's custody and were captured the same day after a running gun battle with police.

Cash Rebates Boost Car Sales

DETROIT (AP) — The depressed U.S. auto industry reported a significant increase in sales during mid-January as it used cash rebates on selected new models to lure customers. But employment in the industry remained down.

Deliveries in the period Jan. 11-20 increased 41 per cent from the exceptionally low levels of early January. They trailed year-earlier levels by 15 per cent and were the lowest for a mid-January since 1961.

There still is a record 100-day supply of unsold models in dealer hands, and U.S. auto companies have 11 plants shut and 228,000 of their 685,000 hourly workers on layoff this week. There were new announcements of layoffs by Chrysler and American Motors, although Chrysler and General Motors will have fewer workers off the job next week.

Auto executives said Thursday the companies' recent offers of rebates apparently spurred sales in mid-January. They said models covered by the discounts of $200 to $600 showed the biggest gain.

Sales normally rise in each succeeding 10-day period of a month as dealers bargain harder to meet end-of-month bills, but industry analysts said the typical increase is only seven per cent.

Deliveries of 131,132 compared with 155,004 for Jan. 11-20, 1974, and 93,235 in early January, when sales were at the lowest level ever for the period.

Sales by Chrysler Corp., first to announce the rebates, were up 89 per cent from early January, but down eight per cent from a year ago; General Motors reported a 54-per-cent gain during the last period but a seven-per-cent drop from the year before; Ford Motor Co. said sales were up 12 per cent from early January but down 25 per cent from last year; and American Motors sales rose 35 per cent from the previous period but trailed year earlier levels by 46 per cent.

GM sales in the period were 65,456, compared with 70,640 a year ago and 42,626 in the previous period; Ford sales were 36,612, compared with 48,628 last year and 34,092 in early January; Chrysler sales of 23,608 compared with 25,728 a year ago and 12,468 in the previous period; and AMC had sales of 5,456, compared with 10,008 last year and 4,049 in the last period.

Bus Tour Company Bankrupt

T.I. Travellers' International Bus Tours Ltd., the Victoria-based tour company that cancelled out on 400 pre-paid holiday reservations shortly before Christmas, has been formally declared bankrupt.

A meeting of creditors will be held Tuesday, Feb. 4, at 2:30 p.m., at the Law Courts here. Any creditor, including the 200 Victoria customers whose tours to Reno, Pasedena or Disneyland were cancelled, are invited to attend.

Following the petition under the Bankruptcy Act heard Jan. 20 by Justice R. A. Wootton in B.C. Supreme Court, Gordon S. Ovens has been appointed trustee in bankruptcy.

Ovens, one of the creditors, will attempt to determine why the company went bankrupt, and ensure that any company assets will be made available for the payment of creditors' claims, including refunds to customers.

The petition was launched by five Victoria area residents hit by the collapse of the company.

CAMERON

Biologist Appointed Director

Roderick L. Cameron has been appointed director of the provincial department of recreation and conservation's new information and education branch.

Cameron joined the department in 1971 as an interpretive biologist and was co-ordinator of information and education services for the fish and wildlife branch for two years.

Educated in Vancouver, he obtained a bachelor degree in zoology and a master's degree in ecology from University of B.C.

Main function of the new branch is to provide better public communication, because of "tremendous growth of public interest in the use and protection of resources," said deputy minister Lloyd Brooks.

Appointment of Robert G. McMynn to a new position as fisheries co-ordinator for the department also was announced.

McMynn, former director of the marine resources branch, will act as senior policy adviser to the deputy minister in fisheries matters and will represent B.C. in federal-provincial and international fisheries issues.

McMynn began technical work in fisheries in 1946, obtained a master's degree in zoology from UBC in 1950 and became chief fisheries biologist in 1955.

In 1963 he conducted an inquiry into jurisdictional and administrative problems in fisheries off the Pacific coast.

50% B.C. Crime Jump Seen; Bigger Jails Said No Answer

VANCOUVER (CP) — The chariman of the B.C. Police Commission said Thursday that if the current trend is maintained the crime rate in B.C. will increase by 50 per cent in the next three years.

John Hogarth said on a police-to-population ratio, B.C. needs 500 more policemen to bring it up to the national average. However, on a police-to-crime ratio, the province needs 2,000 more policemen.

Dr. Hogarth told a one-day seminar on policing in B.C. that he would settle for 800 more policemen in the next three years.

The 800 new men would give a reasonable level of service provided new strategems are adopted to make the best use of police resources, he sail, adding that the requirements are the assessments of professionals and should not be cut back.

Earlier federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand told provincial Attorney-General Alex Macdonald that he is not inflexible on the matter of federal-provincial cost sharing for the RCMP.

The contract between Ottawa and most porvinces to provide RCMP service expire in April, 1976.

Dr. Hogarth said Ottawa is proposing a 20-per-cent cut in it's contribution toward provincial RCMP and a 40-per-cent cut for municipal forces.

"It's not the time to shift priorities into the back end of the justice system," Dr. Hogarth said.

Macdonald said the federal government, which makes the criminal laws, should support policing services on a 50-50 basis as it shares various welfare programs.

Meanwhile Deputy Attorney-General David Vickers said the emphasis on policing in B.C. must be turned from merely locking up lawbreakers to the prevention of crime.

"We don't need bigger and better jails, although we do need some jails," Vickers told the meeting on policing problems.

"What we do need is to put our money into programs at the front end of the system that will prevent crime.

"If we are going to reverse the tragedy of the past of just putting people through the system, just recycling them year after year, our policemen will have to be trained in a different way," he said.

"It's not just a matter of picking them up and delivering them to court on Monday morning."

Vickers said that effective crime prevention, must begin with diversion of people away from crime, a process which starts with a police force involved in what is happening within the community, being aware of problems — such as adequate housing, recreating and education — rather than just arresting persons when they break the law.

Vickers said a major problem in bringing about effective community policing and preventative policing, is lack of manpower, evident throughout the criminal justice system, and in courts and legal and social work offices.

$13M DAMAGES IN RAPE CASE

WASHINGTON (WP) — A Montgomery County Mo., Circuit Court jury awarded $13,355,000 in damages Thursday to a man whose wife was raped and murdered by an employee of a furniture leasing company in the El Dorado Towers apartments in White Oak, Mo. three-and-a-half years ago.

A jury of six men and six women deliberated almost 10 hours, starting Wednesday afternoon, before returning the verdict for Benjamin Blum, a life insurance salesman who now lives in Columbia, Mo.

Blum's wife Barbara, 30, was raped, stabbed repeatedly and finally strangled in the master bedroom of their apartment on Sept. 17, 1971.

The following year Robert E. Watson, a member of a crew removing rented furniture from the apartment next door to the Blums, pleaded guilty to first degree murder and rape and was sentenced to life in prison.

The jury decided that Investors Funding Corp. of New York, which owned the El Dorado Towers apartment complex at the time of the slaying, must pay $11 million in punitive damages.

The jury also awarded $2,355,000 in compensatory damages, which will be split between Investors Funding and the other defendant in Blum's suit, National Services Industries, doing business as the Certified Furniture Leasing Corp., which was Watson's employer.

Resource Gifts Over —Barrett

BURNABY (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett challenged Canadian Youth Thursday to take an interest in what is happening in the country, particularly in the field of energy before "we get conned out of everything."

The premier spoke to a packed audience of students at Simon Fraser University and blasted Ottawa for what he called its "stupid policy on resources and resource taxation."

Ottawa, he said, is being told what to do by foreign countries.

is concerned, the resource give-away is over. And, he said, unless Ottawa asumes public ownership of the oil and gas industry, B.C. will take back control of its resources.

"We've been misled by the oil companies long enough," the premier said. "Now the shoe is on the other foot and we're going to take what rightfully belongs to us."

TORCH CURFEW

Fear of turning the Rockland area into an all-night red light district, led city aldermen Thursday to only partially endorse a request from the B.C. Heart Foundation.

The organization's symbol is a blazing torch over a heart, and it has asked city council to support its Heart Month fund-raising campaign by having the "candle" atop the city's water tower on Belmont Ave. lit continuously throughout February.

Normally the neon light is illuminated from dusk until about midnight. The finance committee agreed that it could also be lit through daylight hours, but didn't want to abandon the midnight curfew.

As Ald. Alf Hood noted, "That light shines into hundreds of bedrooms," and has a distinct "nuisance value."

New Regions for Land Use

Seven resource management regions are being created in B.C. to co-ordinate land use and environmental decisions, Resources Minister Bob Williams said Thursday.

He said the regions, which will report to the provincial government's land use and environment committee, should wipe out the "spaghetti plate" of boundaries shackling efficient resource administration.

Efficient resource administration has been hampered by the varying boundaries for each agency which have evolved separately over the years, he said.

The new management regions will be "progressively implemented" by each of the resource departments and region centres are: Nanaimo, for Vancouver Island; Greater Vancouver, for the Lower Mainland; Kamloops for Thompson-Okanagan; Nelson, for Kootenay; Williams Lake for the Cariboo; Prince George, Omineca-Peace; Smithers, for Skeena.

The committee chose a system of co-ordinated boundaries, said Williams, based on recommendations from the legislature's select standing committee on forestry and fisheries.

The committee said there is inadequate communication among the various resource agencies.

To cope with the difficulty, consolidated district boundaries and locations of district staffs in the same centre were recommended.

District officials are located in several different centres, but Williams said in time they will be re-located in a common centre.

Receivership Faces Centre

Gillian Manor director George Strachan said Thursday he hopes to raise new financing to head off receivership proceedings which may be started against his private alcoholic treatment centre in North Saanich next week.

Farmer Construction Ltd. manager Wayne Farmer said he would launch a suit next week to recover money owing the company for the building, which is nearly complete.

There is $1.2 million outstanding on $1.5 million worth of construction work, Farmer said.

Strachan said the building was mortgaged for $2 million but the funds were to come in over a period of time. The last part of the mortgage has not been delivered and this has resulted in overdue bills, he said.

In addition, the cost of the centre has increased from the projected $2 million to about $2.75 million.

Strachan said he would prefer to refinance for the full $2.75 million, pay off the existing mortgage, and complete the project. He would know within 10 days whether he would be able to raise this mortgage.

The manor, on top of a spectacular hill in North Saanich, commands a view of Pat Bay and Deep Cove in the west and the Gulf Islands and Mount Baker in the east.

It could generate more than $1 million in annual revenue based upon 80 patients paying a minimum of $1,400 each for a 28-day treatment.

'New Year' At College

Students and faculty of Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific will celebrate Chinese New Year Saturday with an afternoon of Chinese cultural activities at the college.

Activities, which run from 2 to 6 p.m. in the college administration building, will include caligraphy, Chinese music, a display of paintings, literature, costume and art works.

Prof. Richard Liu will give a lecture with slides on the development of Chinese painting at 4 p.m.

Dr. Wee Chong Tan will hold an informal discussion of Chinese philosophy and other topics.

The afternoon is free and open to the public.

9 IN MEMORIAM

NAGY—In loving memory of mother Eva, who passed away Jan. 24, 1970, and father Steve, who passed away Oct. 5, 1973.
To hide my sorrow I alway try
I smile with others, alone I cry
These out words are written with sad regret,
Of parents I loved and will never forget.
No longer here our lives to share,
But in our hearts they are always there.
—Sadly missed by daughter Thelma and family.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

'Living Picture' From Garden

Winter flower arrangements from the home garden are perhaps limited in choice of material, but the use of the material is limited only by the imagination of the arranger. Whether you own a garden full of miscellaneous plants or apartment balcony tubs of winter plants, you will find something for creating a living picture either small or intimate or large and elegant.

As a base for the smallest of winter garden flowers, bright green woods moss provides a natural environment with its suggestion of cool depth. Many gardens have a patch of this kind of moss where a slab the size of a saucer or shallow bowl can be lifted without destroying the surrounding plants. Put the piece back into place when you finish with it, if you like.

Keep this moss well dampened in the saucer or bowl, for it not only will supply the flowers with water but humidity from the wet moss will constantly rise around the flower.

My choice for this simple setting is yellow Winter-aconite (Eranthis hyemalis), purple sweet violets, hardy cyclamens, and tiny twigs of winter flowering shrubs too small in size to provide branches.

Stems on most of these flowers are about two inches long, ideal for setting three in a group together. Poke a hole in the moss with a toothpick to insert the stems. No foliage is necessary with the moss base, but if your garden yields three tiny fronds of the native Liquorice-fern you have a miniature landscape in a four-inch bowl with three flowers — as simple as nature.

Twigs of Witch-hazel (Hamamelis mollis), Flowering-plum (Prunus), Corylus and Corylopsis already having flower buds, can be induced to open when brought into the warmth of the house. Immerse them in warm (not hot) water for an hour, then split the stems and set them into warm water and wait for results.

After three days, if no change is noticed, immerse again in warm water. Then cut and split the stems again before setting into water.

Grey Pussy-willow buds have been noticed since Christmas week. They will open readily with the above treatment and make an elegant large arrangement. Curved shaping is accomplished with willow stems after being immersed in warm water for an hour or so.

To complement the silvery grey of willow buds cut an opening bud or two off one of the Hellebores (Helleborus niger or H. orientalis). These so-called Christmas and Lenten-roses open well indoors when cut with short stems. Split the base of the stems and then set into water, preferably in a coolish place.

Using a deep green moss base for this arrangement provides a cool humid air for the Hellebore flowers so they remain in lovely condition for many days. Short stems condition better than long.

Either kind looks so perfect with willow that you will want to use this combination often as spring comes closer every day.

Cluster Plan For Saanich?

Municipal planner Tom Loney has been asked to prepare guidelines for cluster housing zoning.

Mayor Ed Lum said today the 20 cluster housing units in the Feltham-Tyndall area, built by a developer as a pilot project, had two weaknesses. The area was too small for such a project and the units should have been strata-title so arrangements could be made to maintain the open space of the subdivision.

"Cluster housing is a good thing and has been developed all through North America," Lum said, "But the pilot project is too small. It should be on a larger scale and strata-title so that we know the open areas will be maintained."

Both Lum and Loney said the municipality could not undertake to maintain open areas in subdivisions because of the high costs.

The Feltham area designated for cluster housing is roughly 15 acres. Lum said future cluster housing subdivisions should be 25 to 30 acres and, probably, developed by one developer.

In the pilot project, 20 lots have been developed and the remaining one utilized for open space. Thje problem, Lum said, was each resident was responsible for the open space next to his unit but there was no way of ensuring each resident maintained that part of the common land.

Loney said another problem was that there were five or six other parcels in the area designated for cluster housing with four or five developers applying to build subdivisions.

"We would have had less administrative problems" if the area was being developed under one ownership," he said.

Future cluster subdivisions, Loney added, should be on a larger scale and, if not done by one developer, they should have an over-all plan agreed to by the participating developers.

Bingo Fund Trial To Resume Feb. 3

The trial of a Victoria couple charged with theft by conversion of $3,000 from the London Boxing and Athletic Club and its women's auxiliary was adjourned Thursday to Feb. 3.

The trial being heard in county court before Judge M. L. T. Drake against Harold and Ivy Morris, operators of the club, began Tuesday.

In the first two days of the complex trial, the crown, represented by lawyers David Lisson and Donald Farquhar, entered mostly financial records.

Farquhar alleged the Morrises were in control of the club and auxiliary during February 1971 and December 1972, the period the alleged thefts occurred.

He also contended the couple set aside cash from bingo games to pay accounts at B.C. Hydro and Victoria Press Ltd. and later paid these accounts through cheques drawn on the club's bank account. In doing so, he alleged, they converted cash to their own use.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A $500 fine and a two-year period of probation added up to a second chance for a 23-year-old man who appeared in provincial court Thursday facing charges laid last May 9 of possession of heroin and possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

Kenneth Wayne Ramsay, 1512 Brooke, pleaded guilty to the two charges.

"He should go to jail, I appreciate that," said Judge William Ostler, "but this is a special case wherein consideration should be given to the very great effort this young man has made toward rehabilitation from heroin addiction."

Prior to sentencing, the Crown said that Ramsay had a criminal record and was on probation when arrested for possession of six capsules of heroin.

Defence counsel Dermod Owen-Flood said, however that Ramsay's record was due to his addiction; that he had withdrawn from heroin and methadone, and had helped his wife Alice break her heroin addiction.

Ramsay testified that he had become a heroin addict through association with heroin users.

Caroline Haley, one of the founders of the Victoria Drug Concerned Society, testified that Ramsay has been in regular attendance at the drug clinic for a year and during this period she had noted a marked change in his character and lifestyle.

"He has been dissociating himself completely from those in the drug scene to the point of getting up early to go the clinic before others arrive," she said.

In his summary, Owen-Flood urged that Ramsay not be given a jail sentence, voicing his fear of relapse.

"This man has been to jail, he had experience there . . . sending him back would not be helpful," Owen-Flood said.

Ostler said that deterrents were established for the public good and to sentence Ramsay to jail would be a deterrent; the difficulty presented in this case was to decide whether the deterrent or giving the young man a chance would be better for public good.

★ ★ ★

"The reason I was drunk last night," according to Arthur Elliot Inglis, 25, "was that my friends took me out to celebrate . . . you see, I was suppose to leave Victoria today for employment in Yellowknife."

Inglis, of 473 Marigold St. pleaded guilty to a charge of impaired driving and received a 20-day jail sentence. His driver's licence was also suspended.

"I'm very sorry for you . . . but your friends have caused you a great disservice," Ostler said.

"You have a previous conviction for impaired driving and thus I have no alternative but to give you a jail sentence."

★ ★ ★

Gerald Omer Roy, 30, of 1239 Oliver was ordered by Judge Fred Green to attend the impaired driving course after he pleaded guilty to an impaired driving charge.

Green also fined him $325 and prohibited him from driving for 45 days.

★ ★ ★

★ ★ ★

For two counts of breaking and entry, 17-year-old Edmund Robert Piggin of 1120 McClure was sentenced to New Haven correctional school for a period of six months definite and 18 months indeterminate.

The sentence is to run concurrently with Piggin's term of six months definite and nine months indeterminate received Dec. 30 for a break-in and possession of marijuana.

Piggin pleaded guilty to two other charges of breaking and entering. The break-ins occurred Dec. 2 and Dec. 6, while he was on judicial interim release for the marijuana charge.

★ ★ ★

Bail was set at $2,000 for a 20-year-old man charged with robbery with violence in a hold-up at a Safeway store Jan. 10. Richard Dale Smith of 820 Orono, is alleged to have taken $847 from a woman cashier.

★ ★ ★

A five-day jail term was ordered by Ostler for Albert M. Laberge, 17, of 532 Cecilia, who pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana.

Five baggies of marijuana were discovered on Laberge when police searched a house on 511 Frances.

In his sentence, Ostler noted Laberge had a juvenile record and at the time of his arrest was unlawfully at large from a juvenile detention home at Haney in the Fraser Valley.

Leland Edward Niessen, 30, of 994 Londonderry, was fined $75 after pleading guilty to possession of marijuana.

Two joints were found on Niessen when he was checked by police early Thursday in the Yates St. parkade.

SCHOOL TAX HIKE SEEN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Local school board officials say taxpayers throughout British Columbia could be hit with increases in school property tax mill rates unless more provincial aid for education is forthcoming.

A letter sent to school board chairmen this week by the B.C. School Trustees' Association says that many districts face 10-mill increases, and a possible raise of 16 mills in the Fraser Valley.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly announced Dec. 1 an 18.2 per cent increase in basic school aid that comes through a complicated provincial formula.

But the trustees' association said average costs will run about 27 per cent above last year, and added it has been unsuccessful in arranging a meeting with Mrs. Dailly to discuss the problem.

CBC Land Purchase Depends on CRTC

Times News Services

The CBC's purchase of a $500,000 strip of land from the city of Victoria is dependent upon the Canadian Radio-Television Commission approving Channel 10 for the CBC's use, a CBC aide said Thursday.

In Ottawa, Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier had said the federal government is not likely to go along with the B.C. government's request that Channel 10 be set aside for educational television in southwestern B.C.

"One must realize that this request doesn't square with the long-established government policy that educational television should go on UHF and that VHF stations are kept for general broadcasting," Pelletier said.

He said any exceptions to the policy have been transitional and the CRTC is authorized only to give Ultra High Frequency stations for provincial use.

Pelletier said he expected the cabinet decision on Channel 10, the last remaining VHF channel in the area, in two or three weeks.

Ron Fraser, assistant to CBC President Laurent Picard, said the CBC plans for Victoria included both radio and television stations but the exact details of the project, to cost about $6 million, have not been decided.

He said the CBC's application to the CRTC, expected to be made in mid-February, will include plans for over 10 hours of Victoria-produced programming for local, Vancouver Island and national consumption.

If the CRTC does not award the channel to the CBC, Fraser said, a channel on a UHF broadcast band could be a possibility but that band lacks the strength to serve adequately all of Vancouver Island.

Meanwhile in Victoria, Transportations and Communications Minister Bob Strachan said Pelletier's statement on the provincial request for Channel 10 tends to "make it more difficult for the province to develop a more adequate educational TV system."

He said Ontario met with additional expense when it went into UHF educational TV rather than the VHF system envisioned by B.C.

Strachan said he believes B.C. will be able to present a "very strong case" with the federal authorities on its submission for Channel 10.

Rape Trial Jury Hears Details

An all-male jury is expected to reach a verdict later today in the case of Remy Gatto, 28, of 3272 Shelly, charged with raping a 20-year-old woman Sept. 14 in Saanich.

The trial in county court before Judge J. C. Bowk opened Thursday during which the victim "positively identified" Gatto as the man who broke through her bedroom window in the early hours of the morning and raped her.

She said she had just gone to sleep when she awoke to hear glass shattering. She screamed for help. The next thing she knew someone had jumped on her.

She said she kept on screaming but the person hit her across the face, put his hand over her mouth, and told her to shut up.

She wrenched herself free by grabbing and twisting his ear, she said, but the man hit her a second time and warned her to be quiet or he'd kill her.

She said at one point she tried to hit him with a lamp. He saw her reach for it and pulled her away.

A neighbor heard the screams and called Saanich police who arrived on the scene within five minutes. They discovered the broken window and went to the door of the victim's apartment and knocked.

She said the man, hearing the knocks, said, "the police are out there . . . they've come to get me . . . you can scream if you want."

But she didn't, she said, because she was terrified the man would carry out his original threat.

The B.C. federal Liberal caucus will hold a two-day series of meetings in Port Alberni Friday, Jan. 31 and Saturday, Feb. 1, to meet with the public and hear briefs from eight organizations.

Comox-Alberni MP Hugh Anderson said the meetings are part of a series of background briefing sessions by the caucus designed to keep them in touch with issues and concerns in the province.

The Liberal MP said a public meeting will be held Friday evening at which people are invited to ask questions at the Port Alberni recreation centre.

Saturday at the Hospitality Inn the caucus will hear briefs from: The West Coast District Council of Indian Chiefs, the student council of Alberni District High School, the Pacific Trollers Association, the Port Alberni chapter of the International Woodworkers of America, the Port Alberni Realtors' Association, the Alberni-Clayoquot Regional District, the B.C. Construction Association and the Hadassah-Wizo organization of Vancouver.

Tax Removal Grant Deadline Extended

Deadline for applications for last year's homeowner and school tax removal grants has been extended from Dec. 31, 1974, to March 31, 1975.

Housing officials said today the extension is to accommodate people who have not yet filed for the grants.

The long-standing $200 homeowner grant, with the additional $50 grant for senior citizens, was augmented by the government last year with the introduction of school tax removal grants which this year amounts to between $30 and $40.

Application for both grants is made on the reverse side of property tax forms.

Road Study Launched

A one-year's study of environmental, social and economic effects of upgrading the forest road linking the Stewart-Cassiar Highway to Highway 16 will be conducted by the provincial government.

A department of highways spokesman said the study will assist detailed engineering to ensure the alignment of the road, its design, placement of rest stops and recreation areas are considered in terms of environmental and social impact.

Ken Farquharson, of Sigma Consultants Ltd., in Vancouver, will co-ordinate the study and hear briefs from area residents.

However, Highways Minister Graham Lea has indicated the consultants will "not be engaged in the discussion of land claims."

ALCOHOL ON BREATH

The doctor who attended 61-year-old Georgina Head after she had been struck by a car on Patricia Bay Highway and Beacon on Saturday told a coroner's jury Thursday he detected an odor of alcohol on her breath.

Dr. Abdel Ibrahim said the Galiano Island resident received injuries to her head, brain and thigh bone and had been in a deep coma until she died Tuesday.

Coroner Gordon Gerrie adjourned the hearing to 7 p.m. Feb. 3 in the Sidney court house.

Two little girls survived this plane crash which killed their parents

Children Survive Plane Crash

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan's deputy minister social services and his wife were killed in the crash of their small plane Thursday but two young daughters survived.

Hubert Prefontaine, 39, the pilot, and his wife, Carol, 30, died in the crash of the single-engine Piper Cherokee. Jocelyn, 4, and Carmen, 1, were in fair condition in a Regina hospital Thursday. Four older children had stayed in Regina.

The plane was discovered in a field, near Balgonie, 15 miles east of here, about 10 hours after it crashed while on a Winnipeg-to-Regina flight.

George Fuller, a railway signal maintainer who was the first person to spot the wreckage, said one wing, a door and the propeller were torn off by the impact as the plane came down in a snow-covered field.

Art Lemon, an agent for Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, said that when he and Mr. Fuller reached the scene, they found Carmen lying in a hooded bunting bag several yards from the airplane.

"Her face was a little ruddy and there was the odd little bruise on her face and her lips were puffed up a bit but she didn't seem like she was suffering. She heard us and opened up her eyes, she was in a kind of slumber, and asked 'Where's my mommy?' "

Jocelyn was still in the mangled airplane.

"There was the man, he was lying on his back and his head was hanging down with a pool of blood under it and the other little girl was lying just up on top of him," Mr. Fuller said. "The mother was lying outside under the motor, you could just see her legs."

Aid for Elderly Up in Alberta

EDMONTON (CP) — Two-thirds of Alberta's senior citizens qualify for extra money from the provincial government's newly announced plan to increase the minimum income level to $235 a month, says Health Minister Neil Crawford.

Crawford said in an interview a target date of June 1 has been set for the assured income plan, unveiled in the throne speech at the opening day of the legislature Thursday.

The assured income plan will channel an additional $13.6 million to low-income senior citizens, who will gain another $1.6 million in increased services as part of the senior citizen package revealed by the Progressive Conservative government.

Another $1 million will be available to boost the senior citizens' renter's rebate to $150 from $100.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Spokesmen for the Northern Flood Committee said Thursday they still hope to reach an amicable settlement with the Manitoba government over a massive hydro electric project.

But Ken Young, one member of the native group, told reporters the committee may ultimately have to protect its rights "by using reasonable force."

The flood committee wants new land, compensation payments and programs to assist native people affected by the Churchill River diversion, part of a multi-billion-dollar project of Manitoba Hydro.

CALGARY (CP) — Officials of the Calgary Stampede said Thursday they will consider establishment of a horse cemetery on the grounds of the world-famous rodeo and exhibition following the death Tuesday of champion rodeo horse Zone Along.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. HUNTER

Joe held out the crumpled piece of paper. "We'll have to ask for a new invoice," he said. "I can't make anything of this. Only the total amount is at all readable, and two digits are gone in that."

"Not surprising after the fire, but maybe I can figure it out," replied Ken. "I do remember we got as many blades as the price of each in cents, all they had. And you can see three 9's in the total price for them. It's nine something nine dollars, and something nine cents, with no tax or other extra."

How many blades?

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: sirens was 108631.

Boat Hits Whale

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A U.S. Coast Guard hydrofoil boat, speeding through the ocean at nearly 50 miles an hour, struck and killed a whale, the coast guard said Thursday.

The boat collided with the 30-foot grey whale south of San Diego Bay in less than 50 feet of water.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

A most important signal in defensive play is the "suit-preference" signal. Stating this signal as a principle, whenever one leads a suit and partner plays an unnecessarily high card in that suit that is obviously not a "come on" signal, it commands partner to lead the higher-ranking of the two self-evident side suits (the suit being led and the trump suit being excluded from consideration); whenever partner plays a very low card that is obviously not a discouraging "no interest in this suit" signal, that low card asks partner to shift to the lower of the two obvious suits.

SOUTH

♥ 3
♦ 7 6
♣ A K

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♥	Dbl.	4 ♥	6 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♥.

The bidding was rather on the loose side, with West certainly not having a sound opening bid. And South's spurning of the Blackwood Slam Convention enroute to a slam was most unscientific. But, without the employment of the suit-preference signal, the slam might well have been fulfilled.

On West's opening lead of the heart king East played the jack. West now shifted to a diamond, and East's ace took the setting trick. Had West led any suit but diamonds at trick two, South would have made his contract by discarding his two diamonds on dummy's Q-J of clubs.

From West's point of view, East's jack of hearts play had to be a suit-preference signal, asking West to lead the higher-ranking of the two obvious suits (diamonds versus clubs). On South's leap to six spades, he was marked with a long, solid, spade suit. Assuredly East, by playing the unusually high jack of hearts (the highest that East could have held), East could not be asking for a heart continuation since nothing could be gained by forcing dummy to trump. And furthermore, East had jumped to four hearts, so it was evident that the latter had gone out of his way to play the heart jack.

Hence the jack of hearts was a signal to West to shift to the higher higher-ranking of the two obvious suits.

Today's Highlights

CBC Saturday Sports, on 2 and 6 at 1. A two-hour documentary film on the recent trip to Cuba by some 140 Canadian athletes, trainers and coaches, sponsored by the Canadian Athlete Development Agency. The film includes highlights of competitions in volleyball, water polo, fencing, diving and soccer. (2 hrs.)

National Geographic, on 4 at 1. Grizzly — a documentary focusing on the work of Frank and John Craighead, pioneers in grizzly bear research. (60 mins.)

Ascent of Man, on 9 at 8. The Grain and the Stone, part 3 of Dr. Joseph Bronowski's acclaimed series, examines architecture through the ages. The program looks at man and nature as shapers of the environment and includes a visit to Peru's Machu Picchu, the terraced city built by the Incas at the height of their empire. (60 mins.)

DR. JACOB BRONOWSKI
. . . on 9 at 8 p.m.

Carol Burnett, on 7 and 12 at 10. Carol and her regulars Harvey Korman and Vicki Lawrence welcome William "Cannon" Conrad and pop group the Jackson Five to tonight's program (60 mins.)

Movies

Alive in Wonderland (xx) on 11 at 2. An ambitious but disappointing 1933 film version of the classic fantasy by Lewis Carroll, with W.C. Fields and an all-star cast. A must for the young at heart but lovers of the book will not find the film satisfactory.

It Happened to Jane (xx), on 7 at 6. Doris Day, Jack Lemmon and the late Ernie Kovacs star in this silly but pleasant 1959 comedy about a New England business woman dealing in lobsters who manages to throw a wrench into the big-time operations of the railroad. Kovaks all but steals the show as the cigar-chewing, bald-pated railroad tycoon.

Love American Style (xx), on 12 at 7:30. This 1969 comedy with a cast of familiar TV faces served as the pilot for the now-defunct series by the same name. The film contains four episodes and stars Michael Callan and Yvonne Craig.

The Wicked Dreams of Paula Schultz (x), on 6 at 8:30. A tasteless 1968 Cold War farce (in the style of Hogan's Heroes) about an Olympic pole vaulter who defects to the West, starring Elke Sommer, Bob Crane and Werner Klempener.

Woman Times Seven (xxx), on 2 at 9. Shirley MacLaine has an acress' dream in this 1967 comedy-drama — she plays seven different roles with seven different leading men, including Michael Caine, Peter Sellers, Rossano Brazzi, Lex Barker and Alan Arkin. Of the seven stories, Miss MacLaine is at her best in the episode which has her playing an ordinary wife who reverts to hysteria in order to capture her novelist-husband's attention.

The Detective (xxx,, on 4 at 9. Pungent, realistic dialogue and excellent performances highlight this well above average 1968 crime-drama about a hard-bitten New York City police detective investigating the messy murder of a young homosexual. A fine cast includes Frank Sinatra, Lee Remick, Jacqueline Bisset, Ralph Meeker, Jack Klugman, and Lloyd Bochner.

The Scalphunters (xxx) on 5 at 9. Telly Savalas is at his most villainous in this entertaining well-acted 1968 western, also starring Burt Lancaster, Ossie Davis and Shelley Winters. The plot has something for everyone — action, good performances, a frank approach to race relations and a tongue-in-cheek view of the Old West.

Play Misty For Me (xx), on 8 at 9. Clint Eastwood directed this 1971 suspense tale about a popular California disc jockey who discovers that his most ardent fan is a dangerous psychotic with a fondness for knives. Eastwood's not bad, but the performance by Jessica Walter as his lady fan is particularly good.

Mackenna's Gold (xx), on 7 at 11.. An overblown, overproduced, pretentious 1969 western, especially disappointing considering it's fine cast (Gregory Peck, Omar Sharif, Telly Savalas, Kennan Wynn) and cameos by Edward G. Robinson, Lee J. Cobb, Raymond Massey, Eli Wallach, Burgess Meredith and Anthony Quayle. Peck is cast as a marshal who knows where a fabulous fortune in gold is hidden and Sharif is the villain who wants to get his hands on it. For over 2 hours, the two, plus the supporting players, battle it out until all but a few remain for the final confrontation.

You're Telling Me (xxxx), on 11 at 11. The "master" (W. C. Fields) appears in almost every hilarious scene in this 1934 comedy, and he, and you, have a field day. He plays an eccentric inventor who disrupts the lives of his family and friends with his incredible inventions.

The Man with the Golden Arm (xxx), on 5 at 11:15. Otto Preminger directed this once controversial (1955), powerful drama about a narcotics addict and his efforts to kick the habit, highlighted by a fine performance by Frank Sinatra with good support from Eleanor Parker and Kim Novak.

Play Misty for Me (xx), on 6 at 11:20. (See earlier for details.)

Robin and the 7 Hoods (xxx), on 12 at 11:30. An entertaining 1964 musical spoof of the prohibition days in Chicago with Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Sammy Davis Jr. and Peter Falk well-suited to their roles as small-time gangesters who fleece the rich and give to the less affluent. The entire cast appears to be having a good time and so will you.

A Hatful of Rain (xxxx), on 4 at 11:45. A superb 1957 film version of Michael Gazzo's hard-hitting Broadway play about a junkie and the people who love him and therefore suffer with him. The performances of Eva Marie Saint, Anthony Franciosa, Don Murray and Lloyd Nolan are excellent with Franciosa (repeating his stage role as the junkie's brother) a standout, and the last scene with Miss Saint is memorable.

EVA MARIE SAINT

The Quiet Man (xxxx), on 8 at midnight. John Ford's direction and his cameraman's photography won Oscars for this wonderful 1952 Gaelic character study of a boxer who returns to his native Ireland to try and forget an unfortunate incident in his career. Cast includes John Wayne, Maureen O'Hara, Barry Fitzgerald and Ward Bond.

Evil Roy Slade (xx), on 6 at 1:20. A 1972 made-for-TV western spoof starring John Astin, Dick Shawn, Milton Berle, Dom DeLuise and Mickey Rooney, Desert Fury (xx), on 7 at 2:20. A good cast (Burt Lancaster, John Hodiak, Mary Astor and Wendell Corey) is wasted in this confusing 1947 drama about gambling. Everybody in the film has a shady past, and the result is a shady movie.

The Grapes of Wrath (xxxx), on 8 at 2:45. Everybody must see this film, at least once, in order to understand just what the Great Depression in the United States was all about. John Steinbeck wrote the novel and John Ford directed this brilliant 1940 film rendering, starring Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell and John Carradine, who tell the grim story about dust-bowl farmers who head for California in search of work.

SATURDAY NIGHT MOVIE—Clint Eastwood portrays a popular California disk jockey, and Jessica Walter, an ardent but dangerous fan, in the Saturday Night Movie, Play Misty for Me, to be shown on Channel 8 at 9 p.m. and Channel 6 at 11:20 p.m. Eastwood directed this 1971 movie.

World Cup Skiing Finals Hosted by Olympic Champion

Two-time World Cup skiing champion Karl Schranz, acknowledged by most authorities to be the greatest downhill racer of all time, will serve as expert commentator for ABC'S Wide World of Sports coverage of the Ladies World Cup Downhill Skiing Championship via satellite from Lizum, Austria, and the Men's World Cup Downhill Skiing Championship via satellite from Patscherkofel, Austria.

The Ladies World Cup competition will be telecast Saturday, Jan. 25 5:30-7:00 p.m., and the Men's World Cup competition will be telecast Sunday, Jan. 26 (4:00-5:30 p.m.), on the ABC Television Network.

Born in 1938, in the village of St. Anton, Austria, Schranz began skiing on a pair of skis discarded by a tourist to that resort area. He won his first race at the age of five, and became a world class competitor in his teens. He won a Silver Medal in the slalom at the 1964 Winter Olympic Games.

An outspoken and colorful competitor, Schranz has several times been involved in controversy. At the 1968 Olympics, on a day when dense fog obscured the run, he appeared to have won the slalom, but was disqualified when an official said he had missed a gate. Schranz claimed he had been forced off course by another official crossing the run, the judgment held, and the Gold Medal went to Jean Claude Killy. Then, in 1972, he was barred from the Games by International Olympic Committee Chairman Avery Brundage, who charged that the Austrian great was in reality a professional.

Schanz has been seen on many ABC Sports programs, perhaps the most dramatic of which occurred during Wide World's coverage of the International Men's Alpine Sking Championships at Kitzbuhel, Austria.

Schranz had apparently lost first place by fractions of a second, but the finish line camera clearly showed that the official clock had not stopped until he was past the line. The company supplying the timing device was prevailed upon to check its equipment, and it was discovered that an error had been made.

Only a few hours later, at the famous Tenne Bar in the town, ABC, Sportscaster Jim McKay had the first interview with Schranz after he had been notified that a mistake had been found, and the championship was his.

For both the Ladies and the Men's World Cup Downhill Skiing Championships, Karl Schranz will be working with ABC Sportscaster Bob Neattie, the former coach of the United States skiing team.

Movies

The Pleasure of His Company (xx), on 5 at 11. Fred Astaire, Debbie Rednolds, Lilli Palmer and Tab Hunter star in this 1961 "drawing room" comedy about an impending society marriage.

Curse of the Faceless Man (x), on 11 at 2. A 1958 low-budget thriller.

Shadow in the Street, on 6 and 8 at 2:30. An unpreviewed made-for-television drama about an ex-con serving as a parole agent, while on parole himself. This 1975 movie, starring Tony Lo Bianco, Dana Andrews and Sheree North is a pilot for a possible series.

Lover Come Back (xxx), on 7 at 2:30. Doris Day and Rock Hudson star in this 1962 battle-of-the-sexes comedy about two advertising executives who stop at nothing to woo clients from each other. It's entertaining, with good dialogue, some funny situations and good supporting performances from Tony Randall, Edie Adams, Jack Oakie, Ann B. Davis and Joe Flynn.

Operation Snatch (xx) on 12 at 2:30. A 1962 English comedy attempt that is only occasionally funny, about an officer who has to tend the colony of apes on Gibraltar during the Second World War, starring Terry-Thomas and George Saunders. Legend has it that as long as the Barbary apes stay there, Gibraltar will remain in the British Empire.

Red River Range (xx) ,on 11 at 3:30. A 1938 John Wayne western, not to be confused with the classic Red River (1952).

Charley (xxx), on 4 at 8:30. The superlative Academy Award-winning performance by Cliff Robertson playing a mentally retarded bakery worker is reason enough to watch this 1968 drama. The rest of the film is appreciably less successful, including a questionable romance between Charly (Robertson) and a bright, beautiful woman (Claire Bloom) after surgery has drastically improved Charly's I.Q. The film includes some then innovative camera and editing techniques, but it's Robertson's sensitive handling of the title role that makes this movie worth your time.

The Marcus-Nelson Murders (xxxx), on 12 at 9. This is the 1973 pilot that spawned the currently successful crime-drama Kojak, with Telly Savalas initiating role in a hard-hitting story based on fact, about the brutal murder of two Manhattan career girls.

TELLY SAVALAS
. . . on 12 at 9 p.m.

Jane Eyre (xxx), on 4 at 11:30. An excellent cast (Joan Fontaine, Orson Welles, Agnes Moorehead, Margaret O'Brien and Elizabeth Taylor) highlights this 1944 film rendering of the Charlotte Bronte classic about a shy young woman who finds romance and mystery as governess for the children of a moody landowner.

The Norliss Tapes (xx), on 7 at 11:30. Roy Thinnes and Angie Dickinson star in this 1973 made-for-TV crime-drama about a writer who investigates reports of the supernatural.

The Patsy (xx), on 12 at 11:30. Jerry Lewis directed, produced, wrote and stars in this 1964 slapstick farce about a Hollywood bellboy tapped for movie stardom. It's predictable, and not particularly funny, but Jerry did have the good sense to bolster the film with brief appearances from, among others, the late Ed Wynn and Peter Lorre.

If I Had a Million (xxxx), on 2 at 11:45. An enjoyable, multi - stories 1932 comedy-drama about a dying millionaire who chooses his heirs from the telephone book. An excellent cast includes W. C. Fields, George Raft, Gary Cooper and Charles Laughton, with the Fields and Laughton scenes especially funny.

The Quiet Man (xxxx), on 6 at 11:50. John Ford's direction and his cameraman's photography won Oscars for this wonderful 1952 Gaelic character study of a boxer who returns to his native Ireland to try and forget an unfortunate incident in his fighting career. Cast includes John Wayne, Maureen O'Hara, Barry Fitzgerald and Ward Bond.

Evil Roy Slade (xx), on 8 at midnight. A 1972 made-for-television western spoof starring John Astin, Dick Shawn, Milton Berle, Dom Deluise and Mickey Rooney.

The Paleface (xx), on 7 at 1. Bob Hope and Jane Russell star in this 1948 western spoof about a timid Eastern dentist who heads West and meets up with Calamity Jane — and a series of hilarious misadventures. One of Hope's better efforts.

The Grapes of Wrath (xxxx) on 6 at 2:35. John Steinbeck wrote the novel, and John Ford directed this brilliant 1940 film rendering, starring Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell and John Carradine, who tell the grim story about dust-bowl farmers who head for California in search of work during the Great Depression. Everybody should see this film just once, in order to understand what the Great Depression in the United States was all about.

Canadian Actress Shines In Contemporary Drama

Jayne Eastwood

A young wife struggles desperately to save her sanity, her health and her marriage in Last of the Four Letter Words, a teleplay by Nika Rylski to be seen on CBC-TV's Performance, Sunday, Jan. 26, at 9 p.m.

Jayne Eastwood stars as Hardy, a woman who must come to grips with herself following that dread medical diagnosis — cancer. Hardy eventually realizes that she must fight not only for her life, but to restore her sense of perspective and to reverse a deteriorating relationship with her husband (played by Les Carlson) that evolves with her illness...

One of her main sources of strength and inspiration in the struggle to adjust is a down-to-earth nurse named Maxie, portrayed with gusto by singer-actress Phyllis Marshall.

Jayne Eastwood burst onto the entertainment scene with her acclaimed performance as a pathetic waitress who marries the wrong man in the Don Shebib hit feature film of 1970, Goin' Down the Road. Since then her career has taken off with theatre roles in Canada, a six-month stint in Godspell in New York, and plenty of work in TV commercials. She won an ACTRA nomination for best actress for her role last year in Back to Beulah, a CBC-TV drama directed by Eric Till.

In addition to her appearance in Last of the Four Letter Words on Jan. 26, Miss Eastwood stars in Yu're Gonna Be Alright Jamie Boy, scheduled for telecast on CBC television's Opening Night series March 12.

Last of the Four Letter Words is produced by David Peddie and directed by Allan King, the duo who also collaborated on the previous Sunday's Performance production, Baptizing.

Also featured in the cast are Linda Sorensen as Gerry; Pat Hamilton as Miss Stone, Colin Fox as Dr. Priestley; Merle Ann Marshall as Petzke; Susan Conway as Holly; and David Hughes, Cosette Lee, James Edmond and Irene Hogan.

The following week, Feb. 2, Performance will present a major television event, the video version of acclaimed stage production Ten Lost Years, a vivid re-creation of life in Canada during that decade of depression and despair, the 1930s, based on the best-seller by Barry Broadfoot.

CLIFF ROBERTSON won an Academy Award for his performance in the poignant film Charly, the story of a retarded man who is helped by his doctors (including Claire Bloom, above), to regain his faculties, a state which has some alarming consequences, to be shown on Sunday at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 4.

Actor Buys Rights To Guarantee Role

Cliff Robertson won the Academy Award as Best Actor of the Year for his performance in Charly, the gentle drama of a man with the mind of a child, that makes its television permiere on the ABC Television Network's The ABC Sunday Night Movie, Jan. 26 (8:30-10:30 p.m.).

Claire Bloom is also starred as the teacher who develops an interest in Charly and leads him to a team of experimental scientists who completely change his life.

Cliff Robertson first played this character in a television drama called The Two Worlds of Charly Gordon. The actor, who had twice been bypassed for Oscar-winning movie versions of roles he originated (he starred in both The Hustler and Days of Wine and Roses on television), assured his involvement with this motion picture by purchasing the movie rights himself. (Robertson also originated, on Broadway, the role played by Marlon Brando in The Fugitive Kind.)

Charly is a mentally retarded 30-year-old who works as a sweeper in a bakery and hopefully — but futilely — attends night school classes in an effort to better himself. His teacher (Claire Bloom) is both touched and impressed by his pathetic eagerness to learn, and arranges for him to be examined by a team of neurosurgeons who have successfully cured mentally defective mice.

Charly immediately agrees to be their first human "guinea pig," and the experiment is a success — Charly comes away from the operating table with a remarkable capacity for learning.

But for how long?

Ralph Nelson produced and directed Charly and Stirling Silliphant wrote the screenplay, based on the Daniel Keyes short story and novel called Flowers for Algernon. The musical score for the film is by Ravi Shankar.

Adolescence Explored In Human Journey

In most countries of the world, children pass swiftly from childhood to adulthood with little notice of a period inbetween. Adolescence is a luxury enjoyed only by the middle class, industrial nations. On Sunday, January 26, 10:00-11:00 p.m. EST, CTV rebroadcasts the episode Adolescence in the award-winning Human Journey series.

In this program, we take a look at adolescents from several viewpoints: as a group or sub culture in society; as individuals passing a particular stage in life; as as a generation which must relate to other generations; and as people who share the same problems with other persons.

Among the people interviewed are a group of young people of mixed ethnic and economic backgrounds as they are engaged in dialogue with various adults, one of whom as Beatrice Butcher, an 85-year-old former schoolteacher. Qualified adults offering insights into the behavior of adolescents are Dr. Ralph Dent, a behavioural psychologist; A. A. McCann, a high school principal; and Fern Alexander, head of the youth bureau of the Metro Toronto Police Department and a former schoolteacher.

The program talks to parents and finds them in agony as they try to understand and do the right things for their children. Then, when talking to the children, the program discovers that this generation doesn't expect perents to be perfect or without mistakes. They expect advice and want to talk to their parents. Especially they want to stop being talked at and instead be talked with!

Cousteau Profiles Red Coral Divers

Jacques Cousteau has been a long time admirer of the peoples who have courted danger to wrest a living from the sea. Since the beginning of man, the sea shores have been populated because of their food source.

Now, Cousteau films the adventuresome lives of the pearl divers of Tahiti, who dive repeatedly, with no breathing apparatus, 140 feet or more. Off Corsica, he films the dramatic story of coral divers, who lured by the riches obtained from precious red coral, risk their lives and dive to incredible depths with antiquated equipment in the next episode of "The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau" tntitled The Coral Divers of corsica airing Sunday, January 26, 9:00 -10:00 p.m. on the CTV Television Network.

As the world's last great storehouse of wealth, fish, minerals, mollusks and living coral becomes depleted, Cousteau warns that man's assault on the sea must be disciplined. He is not an alarmist but a realist. Cousteau knows that at the rate which the oceans are now being depleted, in ten years there will be no food or wealth to take out of the ocean.

It is possible that the destructive processes can be reversed. If the coral can be saved, Cousteau projects massive underwater parks with submarine vehicles from which the view the living wonders of the water world.

In Niger, a six-year drought followed by torrential rains ravaged the lands leaving the African nation of 4 million inhabitants starving. Movies

A Bullet for the General (x), on 11 at 8. A 1967 Italian-made adventure taking the viewer through bullets and blood with a guerrilla leader during the Mexican Revolution. European cast, dubbed into English.

Al Capone (xxx), on 5 at 3:30. An excellent performance by Rod Steiger as the biggest gangster of all time, aided by a hand-picked supporting cast (Martin Balsam, Fay Spain, Nehemiah Persoff) raises this 1959 crime-drama several notches above average fare. The setting is the Prohibition era in Chicago when Capone controlled everything.

The Boston Strangler (xx), on 4 at 9. Despite its lapses, this 1968 movie is a reasonably absorbing adaptation of the best-selling novel about the Boston murders of a group of women, allegedly committed by a schizophrenic plumber named Albert DeSalvo. Tony Curtis is convincing as the deranged DeSalvo, and Henry Fonda adds to the credibility of the director's direct, documentary-like approach.

Play Misty For Me (xx), on 5 at 9. Clint Eastwood directed and stars in this 1971 thriller about a popular California disc jockey who discovers that his most ardent fan is a dangerous psychotic with a fondness for knives. Eastwood's performance comes off a little flat, but Jessica Walter as his lady fan is very good.

The Big Hangover (xx), on 11 at 10:10. A generally amusing 1950 comedy-drama about a young lawyer who has a peculiar drinking problem. Van Johnson tends to ham up the role a little more than necessary and Elizabeth Taylor relies on her appearance rather than on comedic flair for her role of a rich girl studying psychiatry.

The Deadly Volley, on 4 at 11:30. A recently made, unpreviewed wide world mystery about the ghost of a deceased athlete who joins living members of a professional tennis team as a suspect in the attempted murder of the team's tyrannical owner. Cast includes Beverly Garland and Peter DeAnda.

The Extraordianry Seaman (xx), on 12 at 11:30. A great director, John Frankenheimer (The Train, Seconds) fell flat with this 1969 Second World War farce. The script and the direction lag and even the fine cast of pros (David Niven, Faye Dunaway, Mickey Rooney) can't save it.

GLORIA SWANSON
... on 2 at midnight

The Patsy (xx), on 7 at 11:45. Jerry Lewis wrote, produced, directed and starred in this 1964 slapstick farce about a Hollywood bellboy unexpectedly paged for a singing career. Jerry did, however, have the good sense to bolster the film with delightful cameo roles by people like the late Ed Wynn and Peter Lorre.

Sunset Boulevard (xxxx), on 2 at midnight. If all you have seen is Carol Burnett's comedy take-off, then you own it to yourself to stay up and watch the real thing, and the real thing is this brilliant, Oscar-winning 1950 drama that offers a powerful study of Hollywood decadence, directed by Billy Wilder. Acted to the hilt by Gloria Swanson, the film tells the story of a down-and-out screenwriter (William Holden) who becomes the lover of a fading movie queen of the silent days who wishes to make a comeback. Erich von Stroheim is magnificent as her faithful house servant Max. Don't miss it.

The Hatfields and the McCoys, on 6 at midnight. A 1975 made-for-TV drama about the petty thievery and ill-starred love affair that spawned the legendary feud between two families in the 1880s. Cast includes Jack Palance and Steve Forrest.

Carry On Up the Jungle (xx), on 8 at midnight. Standard 1970 English-mad comedy complete with puns and double-entendres, and set in turn-of-the-century Africa, starring Frankie Howard, Sidney James and Joan Sims.

Satan's Triangle, on 6 at 1:30. Kim Novak was coaxed out of self-imposed retirement to star in this 1975 drama, about the only survivor of a bizarre storm that resulted in the violent deaths of all other passengers on a small fishing boat. Miss Novak starred in another TV movie last season (Third Girl From the Left), and although I haven't seen Satan's Triangle, the plot doesn't sound much better than her last effort. She still looks good though.

The Champagne Murders (xx), on 8 at 2. A 1967 mystery about boredom, corruption and murder among the wine country jet set of France, starring Anthony Perkins and Yvonne Furneaux.

Reaching for the Sun, on 7 at 2:30. No rating available on this 1941 drama a farm-life-loving man who resents the city to which his wife and child confine him, starring Joel McCrea and Ellen Drew.

Novels for Television

ABC Pioneers New Format

Alex Haley's forthcoming epic novel, Roots, to be published this September and John Dos Passos' trilogy, U.S.A., are being developed by the Wolper Organization as ABC Novels for Television, it was announced by Martin Starger, President of ABC Entertainment. Both productions are tentatively scheduled for ABC Television Network airing during the United States bicentennial in 1976, with "Roots" being the most extensive single production ever planned for American television.

"The acquisition of these two major novels, one well in advance of publication and the other an acknowledged classic extends our commitment to pioneering a new dramatic form for television," Mr. Starger stated. "While books have frequently been, and will continue to be used as source material for television, the concept of dramatizing an entire work in whatever length is required by the original is a new form unique suited to our medium.

"We launched this concept with our 6¼-hour production of Leon Uris' QB VII, an event rewarded by high ratings and widespread critical acclaim. Henceforth, all similar full-length productions will be designated ABC Novels for Television, to set them apart from our other productions. Each ABC Novel for Television will present a continuing story divided into the number of parts dictated by the finished film, and the attempt will be made to present each part as a self-contained dramatic entity.

"Books already in development for this series are Joseph Lash's Eleanor and Franklin, scripted by James Costigan and based on both the original work and Lash's sequel Eleanor: The Years Alone; Gore Vidal's Burr, also writen by James Costigan for the screen; and Irwin Shaw's Rich Man, Poor Man, written by Dean Reisner and scheduled for production later this year.

Roots will be approximately 14 hours in length upon completion. David L. Wolper will serve as executive producer and William Blinn, who wrote the screenplay for Brian's Song, will write the outline for the entire project and the script for Part I. Alex Haley will serve as project consultant throughout.

Haley, who did the actual writing for The Autobiography of Malcolm X, spent 10 years on three continents researching Roots, tracing his family back to its African heritage through seven generations. In a larger sense, it represents one man's search for himself by discovering his family's beginnings. The search took him to Gambia, where he traced his great, great, great, great grandfather to the Mandinka tribe through specifics of family history handed down verbally, on both sides of the Atlantic, for over two centuries. With that direct link established, he began the task of assembling interviews and pouring through archives to bring the "characters" in his family saga to life.

U.S.A.will be approximately six hours in length upon completion and will be produced by Jean-Claude Tramont, with Lawrence Turman as executive producer, for the Wolper Organization.

John Dos Passos, called by Jean-Paul Sartre, "The greatest American novelist," completed U.S.A. in 1930. The trilogy consists of The Forty-Second Parallel, 1919, and The Big Money. The sizeable and diverse cast of characters presents a portrait of an entire generation of Americans in the first three decades of this century who fought the first World War to achieve the carefree illusion of the 1920s, only to face the bitter disillusionment of the 1930s.

Star-Studded Cast For Golden Globes

The most popular stars of motion pictures and television, traditionally participating on one of Hollywood's most spectacular events — the 32nd Annual Golden Globe Awards — will be seen on Channel 11, KSTW-TV ,Monday, January 27 ,1975 at 9:00 p.m.

The first major media awards ceremony of the season, staged by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association, The Golden Globes attracts the most important names in the entertainment field yearly, from all corners of the world. Some notables attending last year's ceremonies included: William Peter Blatty, Peter Bogdanovich, David Carradine, Jack Lemmon, Henry Mancini, Mary Tyler Moore, Cybil Sheppard, James Stewart, Francis Truffant, and Robert Young.

John Davidson will host the 1975 Golden Globe, the only awards ceremony honoring achievement in both motion pictures and television. This year's Miss Golden Globe is 17-year-old Melanine Griffit, currently featured with Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward in Warner Brothers' The Drowning Pool. Melanie is the daughter of actress Tippi Hedren.

Richard Dunlap, producer-director of ten Oscar shows and five Emmy telecasts, has been signed for the 1975 Golden Globe Awards. Nelson Riddle and his orchestra will provide the musical accompaniment for the program, originating from the Beverly Hilton Hotel.

World Hunger—Who Will Survive?

World Hunger! Who Will Survive?, is a special 90-minute public tevevision report, with Bill Moyers as host. Filmed in India, Niger, Colombia, Mexico, and at the World Food Conference in Rome, the program is scheduled for broadcast Monday, January 27 at 8:00 p.m. on KCTS-9 over the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS).

Dick Hubert, formerly the award-winning executive producer of the Westinghouse Broadcasting Company's Urban American Documentary Unit, is executive producer and writer of World Hunger! Who Will Survive? Paul Galan, formerly director for the Urban American Unit, is director. Their company, Gateway Production, Inc., is producing the special in association with Health Science Information International. Editorial supervision and control rests with the producing agency for PBS, Connecticut Public Television. S. Anders Yocom, Jr., is Connecticut Public Television's Vice-president for Programs.

World Hunger! Who Will Survive? questions whether nations are equipped to deal with the programs of rocketing population combined with static and even faltering world food production. Three nations serve as case studies: Niger, which many experts declared a "non-viable nation" after six years of drought; India, where a poor crop year combined with a spiraling birth rate has produced a starvation crisis which many fear will deteriorate into massive famine conditions; and Colombia, a nation rich in natural resources which already counts an estimated 60% of its children malnourished and which is expected to double its population in 20 years.

Movies

Three Guns for Texas (xx), on 8 at 12:45. A 1968 western comprising several episodes of the old TV series Laredo, starring Neville Brand.

Massacre at Fort Perdition (xx), on 11 at 1. The sole survivor of a bloody Indian massacre tells the whole story when he is placed on trial, in this 1965 Spanish-made western, starring Jerry Cobb and Martha May.

Fitzwilly (xx), on 5 at 3:30. Dick Van Dyke plays a butler who organizes his fellow servants into a gang of thieves to keep their mistress out of poverty, in this whimsical 1967 comedy, co-starring Edith Evans and Barbara Feldon.

The Pit and the Pendulum (xxx), on 12 at 7. This 1961 horror thriller was the first, and probably the best, of the films based on Edgar Allan Poe tales starring Vincent Price. It has all the stock ingredients — the castle on the hill, fantastic torture chambers, walled-up coffins and screams in the night — enhanced by great special effects and good photography. It's spooky and not recommended for young children.

The Daughters of Joshua Cabe Return, on 4 at 8:30. An unpreviewed 1975 sequel to the 1972 made-for-TV western about three ladies of doubtful reputation who agree to pose for a year as a homesteader's daughters so he can win the title for his farm. Cast includes Dan Dailey, Ronne Troup, Brooke Adams and Christina Hart.

Shadow in the Street, on 5 at 8:30. Another unpreviewed 1975 movie, this one a pilot for a possible series starring that excellent actor Tony Lo Bianco as an ex-con serving as a parole officer while on parole himself, in an experimental prison program. Good supporting cast with Sheree North and Dana Andrews.

Scene of the Crime (xxx), on 11 at 9. An excellent script, good direction and strong performances by Van Johnson, Arlene Dahl and Gloria De Haven highlight this 1949 crime-drama about a Los Angeles detective trying to solve the murder of a policeman.

Someone at the Top of the Stairs, on 4 at 11:30. No rating available on this recently made-in-London mystery, about strange goings-on in an eerie Victorian mansion that threaten the lives of two young women, starring Donna Mills and Judy Carne.

ANNA MAGNANI
. . . on 2 at midnight

The Extraordinary Seaman (xx), on 7 at 11:45. A good cast (David Niven, Faye Dunaway and Mickey Rooney) is about all this 1969 Second World War farce has to offer that fine director John Frankenheimer (The Train, Seconds) struck out on this one.

Bellissima (xxx), on 2 at midnight. A 1952 Italian-made drama starring Anna Magnani as an ambitiouus mother who pushes her plain-looking daughter in an effort to turn her into a European Shirley Temple. What could have been a biting tragedy of stage-motherhood becomes an occasionally effective drama through heavy-handed direction, however the late Miss Magnani is worth watching in anything.

They Call It Murder (xx), on 6 at midnight. A 1969 mystery based on Erle Stanley Gardner's The D.A Draws a Circle, about the investigation of a swimming pool murder. Cast includes Jim Hutton, Jessica Walter and Lloyd Bochner.

The Questor Tapes, on 8 at midnight. No rating available on this 1974 made-for-TV sci-fi effort starring Robert Foxworth as an android programmed to find its missing creator.

Take a Giant Step (xxxx), on 6 at 2:05. A box-office failure at the time of its release, this beautifully-acted 1959 drama is notable as it was the most forthright statement yet made by Hollywood about what it means to be black in a New England white man's world. A winner on the home screen, a fine cast includes Estelle Hemsley, Ruby Dee, Frederick O'Neal, Ellen Holly and Johnny Nash.

Emergency! (xx), on 8 at 2:05. Robert Fuller, Julie London and Bobby Troup star in this 1972 pilot film for the Jack Webb TV series about a para-medic rescue team in Los Angeles.

Man About Town (xxx), on 7 at 2:10. Jack Benny fans will enjoy this light 1939 comedy about a theatrical producer trying to gain a reputation as a lady-killer. Jack is backed by a great supporting cast that includes Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Dorothy Lamour and Betty Grable.

Benjamin Franklin: The Statesman, on 7 and 9 at 9:30. His eloquent speeches help pave the way for ratification of the Constitution by 1789, but his cantakerous egotism tries the patience of his family. An excellent supporting cast includes Michael Learned (of the Waltons) and William Shatner. (90 mins.)

Oscar Winner In CBS Drama

Melvyn Douglas stars as the octogenarian Benjamin Franklin in The Statesman, fourth and last in the mini-series of 90-minute drama specials based on the life of the great American colonial patriot and diplomat, to be presented Tuesday, Jan. 28 (9:30-11:00 P.M.,) on the CBS Television Network.

MELVYN DOUGLAS
. . . as Benjamin Franklin

Co-starring in the drama are Michael Learned, who co-stars on The Waltons, David Wayne, William Shatner, Kristoffer Tabori, Donal Donnelly, Anthony Zerbe and Stephen McHattie.

Douglas enacts Franklin during the final period of his illustrious political career, after his return to Philadelphia from France following a decade of service to his country as one of three commissioners representing the American Colonies at the court of Louis XVI. Although old and ailing, Franklin nonetheless devoted his efforts and his prestigious influence to the ratification of the Constitution by the 13 finally independent but still separate American states.

Douglas, born in Macon, Ga., gained his first theatrical experience with a stock company in 1919. Following his first Broadway appearance in A Free Soul in 1928 and a resounding success in a drawing-room comedy, Tonight or Never, two years later, he eventually went to Hollywood to become one of the film capital's most suave leading men in pictures such as Theodora Goes Wild and Ninotchka.

Douglas subsequently established himself as one of the theater's most distinguished actors with such roles as Henry Drummond in Inherit the Wind in 1955 and William Russell in Gore Vidal's The Best Man in 1960, for which he won a Tony Award. His work in the 1963 film Hud earned him an Academy Award, while television audiences will recall in particular his performances in two CBS Television Network specials Arthur Miller's The Crucible and the CBS Playhouse production of Do Not Go Gentle Into That Good Night, both in 1967.

Michael Learned was born in Washington, D.C., but went to school in London, England. She appeared with the Canadian Stratford Shakespeare Festival — resident and touring in Canada — and with the American Shakespeare Festival in Stratford, Conn. Her television credits include many roles for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. She is an Emmy winner for her portrayal of Olivia Walton on The Waltons series.

David Wayne first performed on the New York stage in 1938, as a walk-on in Escape This Night. His roles quickly increased in content and importance, culminating in OG in the 1947 musical Finian's Rainbow, Ensign Pulver in Mister Roberts the following year, and Sakini in The Teahouse of the August Moon in 1953. He made his motion-picture debut with Portrait of Jennie in 1948. Among his numerous other screen credits are With a Song in My Heart, The Three Faces of Eve and The Last Angry Man.

Like Miss Learned, Canadian-born William Shatner also appeared with the Stratford Festival of Canada, and he first impressed New York theatre audiences with his performance in that company's production of Tamburlaine the Great in 1956. His other major Broadway plays include The World of Suzie Wong in 1958 and the 1961 A Shot in the Dark. On television Shatner is perhaps most closely identified as Captain Kirk on the Star Trek series.

MOVIE SEQUEL—Brooke Adams (1), Ronne Troup and Christina Hart (r) portray the three shady ladies hired to pose as, The Daughters of Joshua Cabe Return, the Tuesday movie to be shown on Channel 4 at 8:30 p.m.

Months Spent On Special Set

Viewers of The Statesman, starring Melvyn Douglas as Benjamin Franklin in the fourth and final segment of the mini-series based on the life of the famed patriot, will be transported through the magic of Hollywood craftsmen to the interior of Independence Hall in Philadelphia as it was circa 1787 while the Constitution of the United States was being drafted, argued over, re-drafted and polished by the nation's dedicated Founding Fathers.

The set, built on a sound stage at CBS Television City in Hollywood, was built to full scale and measured 40 feet by 30 feet.

The Statesman will be broadcast as a 90-minute special drama Tuesday, Jan. 28 (9:30-11:00 p.m.) on the CBS Television Network.

Says art director Charles Lisanby: "Construction of the set was based on research done through the State of Pennsylvania archives. We recreated the Hall as it was in Franklin's time. It has since been reconstructed — and is still undergoing renovation."

Lisanby and his staff spent many months on the project, which, in his words, became "a kind of treasure hunt for architectural detail and minutiae." Moldings and windows were recreated from actual dimensions found in written descriptions and architects' drawings of the time.

"One of our most helpful sources was a store of old paintings. Obviously, there were no photographs in those early days; it was the artists who recorded all we have of visual history."

But these artists were prone to be inconsistent, Lisanby discovered. "Some artists made up things to their own taste," he says.

"Many paintings were done after the fact, with a resulting confusion of memory."

By a painstaking process of research and re-research, of checking and double-checking, the set designer chose the closest possible duplication of the inside of the historic Hall. "We know there were marble fireplaces then," Lisanby reports, "and the green felt coverings on the delegates' tables are authentic, based on the earliest paintings."

The recreation of rooms in Benjamin Franklin's home was an even greater challenge for the set artists. "The house does not exist any more," said Lisanby, "although others from that time still stand. We visited these buildings and adapted some of the basic features to our purposes."

DOCUMENTARY ON CABLE 10

Among the new programs on Cable Ten is the powerful BBC documentary The British Empire.

For 300 years, British traders, adventurers and politicians acquired the scattered bits of land that came to be called The Empire. This "empire" covered a quarter of the land surface of the world and embraced a quarter of the world's population. The 13 programs in this series comprise a dramatised reconstruction of the empire's history.

The Empire began on Cable Ten, January 23 at 8 p.m.

Movies

Thunder in the Sun (xx), on 11 at 1. Jeff Chandler and Susan Hayward star in this routine 1959 adventure drama about a wagon train of Basque settlers on their way to California to cultivate vineyards in 1847. The triteness of the plot is saved at the last moment by a rousingly staged battle scene.

Follow the Sun (xx), on 5 at 3:30. Golfing buffs will enjoy this 1951 biography of Ben Hogan, starring Glenn Ford, Anne Baxter and Dennis O'Keefe. Sports fans will call this movie geat — others, just the usual sports saga.

The Pyx, on 8 at 8:30. A 1973 Canadian-made mystery, filmed in Montreal, about a detective's investigation into the mysterious death of a prostitute, with flashbacks used to reveal events leading to the incident. A strong cast includes Christopher Plummer and Karen Black.

Right Cross (xxx), on 11 at 9. A good script and a strong cast highlights this 1950 prize-fighting story about a Mexican boxer who desperately wants to become a champion. Ricardo Montalban as the fighter takes top acting honors, with Dick Powell a close second as an easy-going sportswriter. Others in an excellent cast include June Allyson, Lionel Barrymore and (in a bit part) Marilyn Monroe.

Gunn (xx), on 12 at 11:30. Craig Stevens recreates his long-running TV role as Peter Gunn, in this 1967 crime-drama about the investigation of a gang czar's murder.

Hide and Seek (xx), on 2 at midnight. A 1963 British-made espionage drama about a professor involved in government work who becomes the target for spies who want to kidnap him. The cast (Ian Carmichael, Curt Jurgens and Janet Munro) handle the familiar material well.

Daughter of the Mind (xxx), on 6 at midnight. An interesting made-for-TV feature based on Paul Gallico's book, The Hand of Mary Constable, about a professor of cybernetics who claims he is visited by his recently killed daughter. The plot thickens when the government and a professor of parapsychology become involved. Filmed in 1969 with Ray Milland, Gene Tierney and Don Murray.

How to Steal an Airplane (xx), on 8 at midnight. Routine 1969 made-for-TV drama about two adventurers out to repossess a jet from the son of a Latin-American dictator, starring Pete Duel, Clinton Greyn and Claudine Longet.

Red River (xxxx), on 6 at 1:55. Top-notch acting, direction and story make this 1952 movie starring John Wayne, Montgomery Clift and Joanne Dru, a western film classic. It's the story of a cattle baron and the empire he builds, filmed against the spectacular background of Texas.

'Till We Meet Again (xx), on 7 at 2. Ray Milland and Barbara Britton star in this 1944 melodrama about a novice nun trying to help a downed Allied pilot in occupied France during the Sec-

A Man Called Gannon (xxx), on 8 at 2:05. A well-paced 1969 western re-make of the 1955 Man Without a Star, highlighted with a fine performance by Tony Franciosa as a drifter who takes a young cowhand (Michael Sarrazin) under his wing and ends up fighting against him in a range war. There's not a wasted scene in this film, and the characterizations probe a little deeper than usual in this type of western story.

CTV Premieres Canadian Film

Wednesday, January 29, 8:30-11 p.m. EST, CTV's Wednesday Night Movie presents the suspenseful and intriguing motion picture The Pyx starring Christopher Plummer and Karen Black.

Karen Black portrays Elizabeth Lucy, a call girl of unusual complexity who is many different things to many men and women. Christopher Plummer co-stars as the tough detective who becomes obsessed by the enigmatic girl and the mysteries behind her fateful date with The Pyx.

As well as meeting the dramatic demands of her role as a call girl, Karen Black has also composed and performed the three songs that she created especially for the film. For Plummer, his casting as a hard-hitting, gum-chewing man of action is an intriguing departure from the classical roles in which he is usually seen.

Both stars are award winners. Plummer was named Best Actor of the Year by the London Standard for his performance in "Beckett," and he has received several Emmy nominations. Karen Black, virtually unknown before registering with a role in Easy Rider, was the winner of the New York Critics' Award and an Academy Award nomination for her work in Five Easy Pieces.

Adapted by Robert Schlitt from the novel by John Buell, The Pyx features Donald Pilon and Jean-Louis Roux and introduces Yvette Brind 'Amour. The Maxine Samuels presentation, filmed on location in Montreal, Canada, was directed by Harvey Hart, acclaimed for his work on Fortune And Men's Eyes, and produced by Julian Roffman.

THE SEAGULL — Frank Langella and Blythe Danner portray the sensitive young lovers who are shocked at a bird's death, in this scene from The Seagull, Anton Chekhov's classic play to be presented on Wednesday at 9 p.m. on Channel 9's Theatre in America series.

Classic Chekhov Drama On Theater in America

The Seagull, Anton Chekhov's classic comedy-drama depicting man's propensity for destroying those he is close to, is this week's dramatic presentation of PBS's Theatre in America series, to be seen locally on KCTS-9 at 9 p.m. Wednesday, January 29, over the Public Broadcasting Service.

Featuring Blythe Danner, Lee Grant, Frank Langella, Kevin McCarthy and Marian Mercer, The Seagull has been adapted for television from a production of the Williamstown (Mass.) Festival Theatre, using the same cast. The play was taped on location amidst an ideal Chekhovian setting at a wooded lakeside.

Theatre in America is now in its second season. The series, according to its executive producer, Jac Venza, is devoted to capturing for television "the vitality of America's growing resident threatre movement. It represents a unique partnership between theatre and television arts."

The Williamstown Theatre Festival has been praised by The New York Times as a place where many of the finest actors and actresses have gone to "nurture and test their talents by playing roles that might not otherwise be available to them in the commercial theatre." The cast of The Seagull offers a strong case in point.

Miss Danner was the winner of Broadway's Tony Award for best actress in Butterflies are Free in 1970; Miss Grant, twice an Emmy-winner, has been a distinguished stage, screen and TV personality since being honored with a Cannes Film Festival Award for her performance in Detective Story in 1952; Langella is one of off-Broadway's most decorated young actors — with three Obies and a Drama Desk Award — and was named best supporting actor by the National Society of Film Critics for his 1971 role in Diary of a Mad Housewife; McCarthy has been for a quarter of a century a respected New York and London stage actor, and has appeared in numerous films.

LEE GRANT
. . . plays Mme. Arkadina

Written in 1896, The Seagull is the first of the four great plays from Chekhov's latter period (along with Uncle Vanya, The Cherry Orchard, and The Three Sisters). Each of the four derives its greatness from Chekhov's incisive, often humours, probing of human motivations.

The Seagull's main protagonists are Trepleff (portrayed by Langella), the youthful aspiring writer who dreams of bringing "new forms" to the theatre; Irina Arkadina (Miss Grant), Trepleff's self-centered mother, an accomplished actress, who derides her son's ambitions; Nina (Miss Danner) the unaffected girl Trepleff loves, who lives under the oppressive rule of her father; and Trigorin (McCarthy), Irina's lover, a popular novelist of the day, who leads Nina into an affair and then abandons her to return to Irina.

Among the dramatic highlights of the play are the sudden, shortlived clashes that characterize the love-hate relationship between Trepleff and his mother; and the famous, electrifying final scene between Trepleff and Nina, in which the brooding young author, seeing the totality of Nina's destruction, is moved to suicide.

Movies

Living Free (xxx), on 8 at 12:45. The whole family will enjoy this 1972 sequel to Born Free, that follows the further adventures of Elsa the lioness and her three rambunctious cubs. Filmed in Kenya, with Nigel Davenport and Susan Hampshire.

Night After Night, on 11 at 1. No rating available on this 1932 drama about a speakeasy owner who falls for a nice girl and tries to acquire "class" in order to win her affections. Good cast with George Raft and Constance Cummings.

The Young Lions (xxx), on 5 at 3:30. (Part 1.) An excellent 1958 film rendering of Irwin Shaw's best-selling novel about three men in the Second World War — a blase sophisticate, a tragic Jew and a realistic German — and their eventual fates. Good production with a fine cast that includes Marlon Brando, Montgomery Clift, Dean Martin, Maximillian Schell, Barbara Rush, Hope Lange and May Britt. (Shown in two parts, with the conclusion tomorrow, same time and channel.)

St. Valentine's Day Massacre (xx), on 7 at 9. A grim 1967 re-enactment of the events leading up to the Chicago underworld's notorious mass murder of the late 1020s, starring Jason Robards and George Segal. (The story almost takes second place to the recent tragic event in Montreal where 13 people died in a similar incident.)

Double Suicide, on 9 at 9. Another in the series of Japanese films in this special PBS series, this one made in 1969 about star-crossed lovers in feudal Japan, based on an 18th-century puppet play. The director uses stylized sets and unusual photographic techniques to give the film the look of Japanese woodcuts.

Border Incident (xxx), on 11 at 9. A well-made 1949 crime-drama with an effective performance by Ricardo Montalban as a Mexican agent who is used as a decoy to break up a large "slave-trading" market. Howard Da Silva and George Murphy co-star.

Petulia (xxx), on 12 at 9:30. An off-beat, but interesting

JULIE CHRISTIE
. . . on 12 at 9:30 p.m.

1968 romantic drama about a kooky, disturbed girl and her tempestuous fling with a doctor. Much of the interest in the film is due to Richard Lester's (Hard Day's Night, etc.) directing techniques, and fine performances not only from Julie Christie and George C. Scott, but from Richard Chamberlain playing Miss Christie's weak-willed husband. The movie is set in San Francisco, and an excellent supporting cast includes Shirley Knight, Arthur Hill and Joseph Cotten.

Sol Madrid (xx), on 12 at 11:30. A strong cast (David McCallum, Stella Stevens, Telly Savalas, Ricardo Montalban, Rip Torn, Pat Hingle and Michael Ansara) highlights this 1968 adventure-drama about drug smuggling across the Mexican border.

Gunn (xx), on 7 at 11:45. Craig Stevens re-creates his long-running TV role as Peter Gunn, in this 1967 crime-drama about the investigation of a gang czar's murder.

The Scarlet Claw (xxx), on 2 at midnight. A 1944 Sherlock Holmes mystery, set in Canada, and starring Basil Rathbone as Holmes and Nigel Bruce as Dr. Watson. A better than average whodunnit.

Guns of the Magnificent Seven (xx), on 6 at midnight. Standard heroics and violence highlight this routine 1969 adventure tale set in 19th-century Mexico and starring Monte Markham, George Kennedy and James Whitmore.

Marriage: Year One (xx), on 8 at midnight. Sally Field plays a bride trying to cope with marriage and preserve her identity as a social activist, in this 1971 made-for-television drama, co-starring Robert Pratt, Agnes Moorehead and William Windom.

How to Frame a Figg (xx), on 8 at 2:05. A 1971 Don Knotts farce that finds our meek hero unwittingly involved in small-town crooked politics.

A Shot in the Dark (xxxx), on 6 at 2:15. A free-wheeling, often hysterically funny 1964 movie highlighted with an excellent comedy performance by Peter Sellers as the bumbling French detective he created in the film The Pink Panther. Elke Sommer is decorative icing on the cake as it's really Sellers' film and he has a field day investigating a pair of murders.

Shanghai Express (xxx), on 7 at 2:25. Nostalgia fans will enjoy this 1932 Josef von Sternberg classic about the Chinese Civil War, with Marlene Dietrich portraying a notorious femme fatale. The supporting cast includes Clive Brook and Anna May Wong.

New Series Role Tailored to Fit

Karen Valentine stars as Karen Angelo in "Karen", premiering Thursday, January 30, 7:00 - 7:30 p.m. on the CTV Television Network. A delightfully funny half-hour comedy series, "Karen" revolves around the life of a vivacious, young woman who works for a citizens' action organization called 'Open America!" (Karen also premieres on Channel 4 at 8:30 p.m.).

'Open America' is a lobbying organization to serve the people, pressuring the government to pass bills they feel are in the best interests of the country. Karen Angelo, a spunky young career woman, is paid a nominal salary as a volunteer in the group's Washingtron branch. Karen's enthusiasm is contagious and her ideas, novel, as she does her utmost to publicize their cause and raise much-needed funds.

The antics of Karen. her co-workers, and two zany roommates, plus glimpses of politics from the inside add to the hilarity. The stories are filled with comedy characters and a realistic, intelligent potrayal of the efforts an issues of our time.

Well suited to the role, Karen Valentine's personality is similar to the character she portrays. Both are aware, upbeat, driving and eager to please.

Karen began her show business career by being invited to perform on the Ed Sullivan show after appearing in a competition for the Miss Teenage America contest. Entering the Miss California contest, she placed as finalist and won two scholarships which she used to study acting at UCLA.

After the usual stint of part time jobs to keep her active in acting she was chosen for the role of student-teacher Alice Johnson in Room 222 and from then she has been a starring performer. She won an Emmy in her first season on the series and was nominated for the same award the following year.

Soon, she starred in numerous features for television including, Gidget Grows Up, The Daughters of Joshua Cabe, Coffee, Tea or Me, and The Girl Who Came Gift Wrapped. She has made guest appearances in such series as The Bold Ones, Owen Marshall, The Johnny Carson Show, The Sonny Comedy Revue, and The Bing Crosby Yuletide Show.

Best Congress Money Can Buy

"There was a time when campaigning meant mostly talk," says CBS News Correspondent Dan Rather, anchorman of CBS Reports, "and talk was cheap when it wasn't carried from coast to coast. There was a certain amount of campaign hoopla, but nothing fancy."

Nowadays the "game of running for office," says Rather, "is high-powered and high-priced." When candidates submit their final reports on their campaign financing for last fall's election, "the total costs could easily hit $80 million, and there's probably another $10 million that ought to be counted in but won't be because it escapes the technicalities of the laws."

How political campaigning — from Woodrow Wilson to election night in 1974 — has become a big-money event will be examined on CBS Reports: "The Best Congress Money Can Buy" Friday, Jan 31, (10:00-11:00 p.m.) on the CBS Television Network.

In 1912 Deomocrats doled out a "mere" one million dollars to elect Woodrow Wilson as President. "You can hardly carry Ohio nowadays on that kind of budget," says Rather. "Back then, campaign technology consisted of the Flag and the handshake. They way you reached the voter was in person — by car or by train."

Things began to change in the 1920s, notes Rather, when politicians adopted a new-fangled yet effective campaign instrument: radio. It helped elect Calvin Coolidge; its use was perfected by Franklin Delano Roosevelt. And it boosted Harry Truman's campaign in 1948, when Eleanor Roosevelt delivered a last-minute speech over the airwaves.

"That bill was $25,000. It was the last time politics came that cheap," says Rather. "Mrs. Roosevelt's speech was paid for by passing the hat in New York's Greek restaurants — a source of support for Truman after his foreign-aid doctrine to save Greece from Communist insurgence.'

Plain cash — or "the collection plate filled to overflowing out of the beneficence of public-spirited citizens" — is not an effective method in these post-Watergate days, noted Rather. "Political campaigning has acquired all the elements of a big-time professional sport: competition, audience and big money — the allure and the pitfalls."

DISNEY SMILES FOR 1975

Entering 1975 we need all the chuckles we can get. So the good news is that Walt Disney Productions, the biggest, busiest fun factory in the world, is running at full tilt to keep everybody smiling.

Eight movies are coming off the line this year, plus continuing programs on The Wonderful World of Disney television series. Disneyland and Walt Disney World will be bustling with new attractions and entertainment, and a steady outflow of music, records, publications and character merchandise will accompany theatrical releases.

The Mickey Mouse Club (remember Annette and Cubby and Darlene and Jimmie and Roy, the Big Mooseketeer?) returned to TV on January 20 on Channel 11 at 4 p.m.

Two new attractions open in January at Walt Disney World, and an extravaganza celebrating America's bicentennial will premiere this summer at the theme park in Florida and Disneyland.

The Strongest Man in the World, in which a couple of collegians concoct an instant strength potion, leads the studio's lineup of new films for '75. Kurt Russell, Joe Flynn, Eve Arden, Cesar Romero and Phil Silvers head the comedy cast.

Escape to Witch Mountain, a thriller about two youngsters with supernatural powers, arrives at Easter. In this one the kids outwit their elders, a switch small fry should find enchanting. Kim Richards, 10, and Ike Eisenmann, 12, cross paths with Eddie Albert, Ray Milland and Donald Pleasence.

Next comes The Apple Dumpling Gang, an early California comedy about rival bank robbers who hit the same bank at the same time. Bill Bixby, Susan Clark, Don Knotts, Tim Conway and Harry Morgan head the adult cast, with Clay O'Brien, 13, Brad Savage, 8, and Stacy Manning, 6, playing the title trio.

One of Our Dinosaurs is Missing stars Peter Ustinov as a Chinese super spy and Helen Hayes as his nemesis, an English nanny. This summer release, laid in the 1920s, was filmed in London against murky settings reminiscent of Bulldog Drummond, Sherlock Holmes and Fu Manchu.

Christmas sees the return of Walt Disney's classic Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. Swiss Family Robinson and Bambi also will be shown during the year.

Maclear Investigates The People Smugglers

During this time of detente between East and West there still exists an embarassing, yet profitable, problem — smuggling. Not jewels, not money, not merchandise, but people are the subject of the next investigation on CTV's Maclear episode entitled The People Smugglers, airing Thursday, January 30, 9:30-10:00 p.m.

Travelling to Zurich, Switzerland, correspondent Michael Maclear interviews the man known as the "King Of The Smugglers." His name is Hans Lenslinger. He lives in a large luxurious villa complete with his own private zoo. He heads a large organization that smuggles people out from behind the Iron Curtain, for a price, and his price is $10,000 a person. He modestly estimates that he has brought about 500 people to the West since he began.

Also included in the show are interviews with two other smugglers. One is a successful drug store entrepreneur whose smuggling practices allowed him to purchase these stores. Another is a woman, caught by authorities, who has just been released from prison.

Travelling to West Germany, Maclear brings to light some of the practices and techniques used.

Cable 10 Tax Help

It's time for that annual chore — including endless tabulations and figuring, but this year the department of national revenue is out to give all the help it can with your tax return. The Victoria department begins a series of public information programs: The 1974 Income Tax Return, later this month. It's another public service from Revenue Canada Taxation and Cable 10.

During 13 weeks they will concentrate on returns for senior citizens, single parents and step-by-step instruction on the preparation of a 1974 tax return. In addition, telephone lines will be open for questions every few weeks. Two special programs have been prepared on tax deferral plans such as registered retirement savings plans — both these programs have been scheduled on Cable 10 before the Feb. 28 deadline for contributions to such plans.

With the help of the federal taxation staff, insurance agents and trust company agents — it shouldn't be a chore after all.

Remember — the tax man cometh — so make it easier on yourself — watch The 1974 Income Tax Return beginning on Jan. 30 at 7 p.m. on Cable 10.

First Appearance

In her first appearance with the festival, Kathleen Widdoes will appear as Mariana in Measure for Measure and as Viola in Twelfth Night.

Movies

The Far Out West (xx), on 8 at 12:45. A 1967 western spoof about a frontier family whose women can outdraw the men, starring Ann Sheridan and Ruth McDevitt.

The White Warrior (x), on 11 at 1. A 1959 Italian-made adventure, highlighted by a silly plot, bad English dubbing and stilted performances. Muscle-man Steve Reeves stars — if you care.

The Young Lions (xxx), on 5 at 3:30. (Part 2). Conclusion of an excellent film starring Marlon Brando, Montgomery Clift and Dean Martin. (See Thursday, same time, and channel for details.)

Maciste Agains Hercules in the Vale of Woe (x), on 11 at 9. An awful, Italian-produced adventure, dubbed into English: Woe is you if you have nothing better to do with your time than watch this silliness.

The Long Ships (xx), on 12 at 9. One of those epics about a brave Viking and his search for a golden bell, opposed by villainous Moors. Good actors (like Richard Widmark and Sidney Poitier) usually look silly in this kind of film, and this 1964 effort is no exception. The two-star rating is for the scenery only.

Tom Jones (xxxx), on 12 at 11:35. A fantastic, marvelous, hilarious 1963 film — one of the tiny number of films that it is hard to overpraise. The remarkable screenplay by John Osborne, based on Henry Fielding's classic novel of life in 18th-century England, manages to pare down the lengthy content, without losing the spirit or infectious, rollicking, bawdy quality of beautiful England two centuries ago. Brilliantly directed by Tony Richardson, with flawless performances by Albert Finney, Susannah York, Diane Cilento, Hugh Griffith, Joan Greenwood, Joyce Redman and Dame Edith Evans. Absolutely recommended!

Night Key, on 7 at 11:45. No rating available on this 1937 melodrama starring Boris Karloff as a kindly old inventor seeking revenge when his new type of burglar alarm is stolen by a former partner (Warren H.).

Death on the Four Poster (x), on 6 at midnight. A 1963 Italian-made chiller about brutal murder at a gloomy castle where some young people are having a wild party. Cast include John Drew Barrymore.

ALBERT FINNEY
. . . on 12 at 11:45

BARBARA STANWYCK
. . . on 7 at 3:05 a.m.

Island of Terror (xxx), on 8 at midnight. A well-done, 1966 English-produced science-fiction thriller about cancer-cure experiments on an isolated island that produce a breed of deadly turtle-like creatures. For shudder addicts.

The Mole People (xx), on 7 at 1:05. Routine 1956 science-fiction tale about scientists held captive in a lost mountain city in Asia.

Thunder in the Valley (xx), on 6 at 1:40. Edmund Gwenn, Lon McCallister, Peggy Ann Garner and Reginald Owen star in this 1947 movie adaptation of a children's story about a father-son conflict over a dog suspected of killing sheep.

Nightmare in Chicago, on 8 at 1:50. No rating available on this 1967 TV thriller about an escaped killer terrorizing the city for 72 hours, starring Philip Abbott, Ted Knight and Robert Ridgely.

Double Indemnity (xxxx), on 7 at 3:05. Deliberate murder receives a microscopic examination in this tense, exciting, well-acted 1944 adaptation of the James Cain best-seller. Directed by Billy Wilder, and starring Barbara Stanwyck, Fred MacMurray and Edward G. Robinson, the plot revolves around an unfaithful wife who traps an insurance agent into helping her murder her husband.

9 WAGE CONTRACTS NEGOTIATED

Gov't Hikes Up to 44%

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Salary increases averaging more than 20 per cent and ranging as high as 44 per cent for certain civil servants are included in new component contracts negotiated with the provincial government.

Details of the contracts are officially being kept secret by both the government and the B.C. Government Employees' Union (BCGEU) pending completion of contracts with all 13 occupation groups.

But nine of the components have already negotiatedd their first individual contracts and some of their new salary schedules have been released through cabinet orders.

Comparing the 1973 salary schedules with the available new wage scales reveals some junior categories of civil servants have been granted increases amounting to 44 per cent.

Four component settlements were used in the comparison and three of those granted across-the-board increases to all members of the occupational group.

The largest group, the Administrative Support Component, granted all 7,700 members a $100-monthly increase effective April 1, 1974, and an additional $60 increase effective Oct. 1, 1974.

In addition, each category was granted another increase on Jan. 1 and those increases appear to amount to about four per cent over the Oct. 1 salary level.

The combined increases mean a 44 per cent salary hike for those in Clerk 1 positions, who will go from $420 a month in 1973 to $605 a month as of Jan. 1.

For top clerks ,the increase is about 26 per cent; for top key punch operators it amounts to 27 per cent; and for the lowest category of surveyors in the land registry branch it means about a 28 per cent increase.

Some groups have been granted cost-of-living increases, including the Administrative, Regulatory and Fiscal Component.

About 1,350 senior administrative people in that group appear to have been granted a $125 increase across-the-board as of April 1, 1974, an board as of April 1, 1974, and another, varying increase on Oct. 1, 1974, in addition to a cost-of-living hike.

Those increases, excluding the cost-of-living bonus, appear, for example, to amount to about 28 per cent for junior adminstration officers, about 23 per cent for junior appraisers, 26 per cent for senior appraisers, 34 per cent for junior driver examiners and 23 per cent for deputy sheriffs.

The cost-of-living index in the agreement is described in

Times London Bureau

LONDON — The wisdom of a Canadian aid project in Tanzania is questioned in a leading British scientific magazine this week.

The New Scientist says a newly automated bakery set up with the help of more than $1 million in Canadian tax revenue in Dar es Salaam may not be the best idea for that country at its current stage of development.

The magazine says small bakeries in Dar es Salaam had been providing sufficient bread using wood or charcoal burning boilers and a flexible range of raw materials, including maize during the recent wheat shortage.

A condition of the loan was that Canadian equipment supplied by a company called Baker-Perkins be used. The new plant, 100-per-cent imported from Canada, has an oil-fired boiler and must have all spare parts imported from Canada, according to the New Scientist.

Furthermore, "the bakery requires 50 per cent hard wheat, which has to be imported as it cannot be grown locally."

The cost-per-job is rated at $46,000 as opposed to $2,000, had the existing Dar es Salaam technology been used.

Production in local bakeries "has to be cut" and employment in the industry "will stagnate for the next few years."

OTTAWA — The Canadian International Development Agency is rushing to spend $117 million within the next three months in an effort to impress Treasury Board officials.

Lagging disbursements in the bilateral branch of CIDA are believed to be causi concern because they shortfall the Treasury Board's $497.95 million limit set for 1974-75 bilateral spending.

CIDA apparently feels it must spend the lettover $117 million in order to strengthen its bargaining position when the Treasury considers the agency's 1975-76 cash allocation.

This effort tends to bear out one of the main contentions of CIDA dissidents — that the chief emphasis in the agency is placed on producing figures to support an impression that Canada is in the vanguard of nations providing development assistance.

The purpoose is to meet the target of the World Bank's Commission on International Development headed by Lester B. Pearson, the late Prime Minister. This suggested that by 1975 official aid should reach 0.7 per cent of the gross national product of donor countries.

In fact, the Canadian government has never set a specific date for achieving this objective. It remains a CIDA preoccupation without official sanction.

It is understood that of the several government departments and agencies represented on the Canadian International Development Board, only CIDA favors setting a date for the 0.7 per cent objective.

"Your career in CIDA depends on how you spend," a former Agency official said. "You are constantly being

NO REAL ANSWER

OTTAWA (FP) — Questions fired at Prime Minister Trudeau regarding a reported multi-million dollar spending spree by the Canadian International Development Agency drew response, but no real answers, from House Leader Mitchell Sharp in the Commons Thursday.

Sharp merely reiterated an earlier promise by External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen that CIDA will be studied by a Commons committee.

Schools Revive Strap

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The London board of education voted Thursday to reinstate the strap in the city's public elementary schools, ending a ban on corporal punishment which has been in effect since early 1972.

The board instructed a committee of administrators and representatives of two elementary school federations and the principals' and vice-principals' associations to prepare guidelines for use of the strap.

The guidelines will be presented to the board for approval and the strap is expected to be back in use within two weeks. There are about 30,000 children in the schools.

The board heard submissions from 10 members of the public and only two — a retired teacher and Sam Warren, president of the Ontario public school men teachers' federation — supported the strap's return.

The other speakers — psychiatrists, child-care workers, parents and a represeneative from the association for children with learning disabilieies — said the ban should continue.

Dr. Ben Goldberg, director of treatment, training and research at the children's psychiatric research institute, said corporal punishment is an ineffective deterrent and encourages truancy.

Dr. Goldberg said officials a juvenile and family court have indicated they would welcome greater communication between schools and the court "for more effective management of troubled and troublesome children."

The doctor said the 1972 ban on the strap brought about requirements for "a complete change in the philosophy of discipline in the schools."

Dr. Goldberg said juvenile courts and not teachers should discipline troublesome children. He said a return of the strap would end the urgency to develop alternatives.

Most supporters of the strap chose not to debate the issues, confident they had a majority of votes.

Short-Term Loan Rates Collapsing

Short-term interest rates continued to collapse across North America today, apparently to counter the competition from Arab oil countries loaning billions at 8 per cent.

Canadian banks and trust companies have reduced the rate they will pay for short-term money to 6.5 per cent (or to 6 per cent in some cases), down from 10.5 per cent two months ago.

The Bank of Montreal announced Thursday it will drop its major interest categories effective Feb. 1, with the prime rate falling to 9.75 per cent from 10.5 per cent.

Other banks are expected to do the same.

The banks had cut the rate from 11 per cent to 10.5 per cent two weeks ago.

A further drop is expected in mortgage interest rates as well. They are down to 11.5 per cent from 12 per cent and a further decline to 10.75 per cent has been forecast.

"This drop could come any day," a spokesman for a Victoria trust company said.

Meanwhile, J. A. Baines, manager of the main branch of the Bank of Montreal in Victoria, said today there had been no word of changes in mortgages rates in the general rate decline announced by his company in Montreal.

Maclean's Revives Plans for Weekly

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The president of Maclean-Hunter Ltd., Donald Campbell said Thursday his company will reactivate planning for publication of a weekly newsmagazine in the wake of the federal government's decision to cancel tax privileges to Time and Reader's Digest.

"We've done some rough work for the past few years that we had to put on the shelf," he said.

"Now, we'll take it off the shelf."

Maclean - Hunter is the owner of Maclean Magazine and one option would be to turn Macleans from its present monthly format into a weely news publication, Campbell said.

The legislative changes, however, produced differing responses from Time and Reader's Digest.

Stephen LaRue, president of Time Canada, said the decision will mean the death of the Canadian edition of Time which features about 10 per cent Canadian content.

Reader's Digest was more optimistic.

The government wants to provide incentives for creation of Canadian news magazines said Htncox and if they now are not formed "it will be a great tragedy."

Because Reader's Digest "is not in competition with news magazines," Hancox speculated legislation would perhpas be amended to permit the publication's Canadian advertisers to continue deducting advertising fees from their income tax.

He was confident the government would not jeopardize the future of the Reader's Digest Canadian edition, although State Secretary Hugh Faulkner said the proposed changes would affect that publication.

NO B.C. AID TO OLYMPICS

Premier Dave Barrett said today that "under no circumstances" will B.C. pay money to the federal government to offset the deficit of the 1976 Montreal summer Olympics.

"I see no reason people in the province should be assessed for taxes to pay for the deficit," said Barrett, "it's nonsense." The premier made the comment following a report Quebec is requesting additional federal aid for the Olympics since costs have more than doubled the original estimate of $300 million.

Congress, Unions Angered by Ford

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Acting before Democrats in Congrss could stop him and over the protests of many groups including the AFL-CIO, President Ford Thursday signed into law his plan to increase oil-import fees.

The action will raise gasoline prices at least three cents a gallon and also poses the possibility of a Congressional veto showdown from angered lawmakers, many of whom favored a gasoline rationing program.

Governors of at least four northeastern states, which depend heavily on imported oil, also promised suits attempting to overturn the tariff.

George Meany, President of the AFL-CIO called Ford's overall plan to deal with problems of energy and recession "the weirdest" and unveiled alternative proposals.

The giant labor federation called for gas rationing and a ban on imports of oil from countries which embargoed shipments to the United States and the Netherlands last year.

The order Ford signed Thursday creates a $1 a barrel tariff on imported oil effective Feb. 1, rising to $3 in April.

"It seemed to me the time for conversation had ended and we had to act," the President explained on a television interview Thursday night.

Ford hopes the tariff will begin to reduce U.S. dependence on foreign oil and that higher gas prices will persuade Americans to conserve fuel.

"We've diddled and dawdled long enough," he said at an impromptu news conference after signing the proclamation.

CN SHUT DOWN

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian National Railways' transcontinental rail service was suspended Thursday night after trains were cancelled in New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario and the West because of walkouts of locomotive engineers.

Alberta and British Columbia were the most severely affected, with the CNR suspending virtually all freight and passenger services in the two provinces, effective today.

The engineers began booking off sick or for study sessions across Canada Thursday and would give no indication when they will return to work.

They are seeking a change in their contract to give them the same 15-per-cent wage increase that members of other railway unions received Jan. 1. The members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers are not due to receive their 15-per-cent increase until May 1.

Caught or Not, Smuggled Men's Future Bleak

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Young Punjabi men illegally smuggled into Canada face a grim future if they are caught and sent back to India — but the outlook is almost as bleak if their entry attempt is successful.

The men, usually young and usually married, often spend the rest of their days paying off a mortgage company debt if they are caught and sent home.

But if they slip into the country undetected, they face a life indentured to the agent who lured them to Canada with tales of prosperity and happiness.

The Victoria immigration office earlier this week broke a smuggling operation which brought 25 of the young Punjabis into Victoria International airport between Dec. 20 and Jan. 20.

Twelve of them have already been deported and others, with relatives in Canada, were allowed to stay for a three-month visit after first posting a cash bond ensuring their departure after the three months are up.

The agent who lured the men here is also an East Indian who lives off his own people, to the great disgust of the East Indian community.

"In every country there are people who try to take advantage of their own people," says Ajaib Singh Sangha, one of the elders of Victoria's Sikh community.

"The farms are in the family. They are passed down from father to son, father to son, and many families have been on the same piece of land for 400 or 500 years."

"He tells them, we'll take you there, to Canada, where there are lots of jobs for everyone and lots of money," Sangha says.

"And these people fall victim to their own ignorance. They are law-abiding and peaceful. If they knew the laws and regulations they wouldn't come here."

But the young men are taken in. They mortgage the family farm to get enough money to put a down payment on the agent's asking price for a ticket to Canada, which is often as much as $10,000.

"They are easy prey for these agents," Sangha says. "Then if they are caught and sent back, the farm is already mortgaged."

If the years are good, the family can work on paying off the mortgage, but if the years are bad, the farm can be repossessed, and then they have nothing.

Sangha himself came to Canada 50 years ago, legally, and has raised a family of four sons and two daughters.

He knows the problems faced by the Indian immigrants who come here in accord with the immigration laws.

For those who come illegally, the hardships are much worse.

A few years ago, sawmills and the outpost logging camps were a favorite repository of new East Indian immigrants, both legal and illegal.

Sisters Must Leave By the End of April

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Five plaintiffs, including Mother Cecilia, 85, have lost their court battle to gain control of the Society of the Love of Jesus at Langford and its assets estimated at $1.5 million.

The judgment handed down by B.C. Supreme Court Judge Harry McKay in Vancouver Thursday ends an internal dispute within the Roman Catholic religious society which has simmered and flared for years.

It confirms that the plaintiffs, Cecilia, founder and former prioress at St. Mary's Priory, and former sisters Mary Agnes Eaton, Mary Josephine Donoval, Mary Lucy Forde and Mary Julia Kelly, were properly dismissed as religious sisters by the church and therefore cannot be society members.

It also confirms Sister Leonette Hoesing, the present prioress and main target of the plaintiffs, as properly elected and holding office.

McKay's judgment gives the three former sisters, Eaton, Donovan and Forde, to the end of April to move from the Priory building they have refused to leave in recent years.

The trio staged a "sit-in" at the Priory from March to October of 1973 which at one stage had both factions hiring security guards.

The other two pliantiffs, Cecilia and Kelly, operate the Good Shepherd Animal Shelter at Mill Bay and have not lived at the Priory for years.

McKay's judgment, which has harsh words for the plaintiffs, followed a four-week trial in Victoria last fall.

The five former sisters, represented by Hugh McMillan, sought a declaration they were the only society members in good standing and entitled to control

The society, represented by Cecil Branson and Patrick Bion, disputed that position and counter-claimed the plaintiffs were no longer society members.

Mother Cecilia founded the society in Vancouver more than 50 years ago and led its members into the Roman Catholic Church in 1937.

In his judgment McKay said:

"... it is clear that from the very first the hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church had great difficulty in dealing with Mother Cecilia.

"She has been for some years a law unto herself and found it difficult to comply with the lawful orders of her superiors ... She was, to put it mildly, a most difficult lady to deal with.

"She attracted from the sisters under her a remarkable degree of loyalty particularly as she coud be quite ruthless and verbally curel in her dealings with them."

In part of his review of events, he said: "... notwithstanding the excellent work being done by the sisters it is clear the Order remained dissenstion-riddled."

Of her later work with care of animal waifs, McKay said:

"The work has received mixed reactions from the public and has proved to be somewhat of an embarrassement to the Catholic Church as it is associated in the public's mind with the work."

The plaintiffs argued throught the court case that the present prioress "was engaged in a diabolical scheme to destroy the defendant society and turn over the assets of the society to the Roman Catholic Church.

"The submission is plain rubbish and has no basis in fact.

"The evidence is clear that throughout the years of her stewardship she has wanted nothing more than to return to the tranquility of her community in Yankton.

"She has worked under intolerable conditions to try to bring peace and stability ... a weaker and less dedicated person would have washed her hands of the whole mess years ago."

The judge agreed Mother Hoesing has been the victim of the "cult of the foundress" (Mother Cecilia) and of the reldctance of the chlrch to take stern measures against Cecilia and the other plaintiffs.

McKay said in his judgment that it is obvious Sister Mary Agnes (Eaton) "was a good part of the over-all problem."

The three sisters living at the priory (Eaton, Donovan and Forde) proceeded in recent years "to make life miserable for everyone around them. They were openly defiant of the prioress and did all they could to disrupt community life."

During the trial the plaintiffs described activities, including encounter sessions and mixed group meetings in the priory which they took exception to.

"The allegation of orgies within the priory is without foundation," the judgment said.

And later: "This allegation was, to my mind, both vicious and irresponsible. As one can readily imagine the press had a field day with this titillating allegation."

He dismissed the plaintiffs' case as "without merit" but said he is certain the society will see they are adequately cared for in recognition of many years of valuable service given the society.

'PRIORY DISGRACED'

She lost one in B.C. Supreme Court Thursday.

Asked to comment on the judgment which confirms she has been dismissed from the Roman Catholic Church and from Langford's Society of the Love of Jesus, she said today she hadn't approved of going to court in the first place.

"I never want to see the priory again. It's been disgraced."

She said she was not interested in the court case "except to feel sorry for the three sisters at the priory."

Passes Offered Reporters

In the event of a strike by city outside workers passes will be offered to reporters so the union will know which reporters are going in to City Hall, the president of Local 50, Canadian Union of Public Employees said today.

Jim Walker said the passes will not be given to individual radio stations or newspapers but to the particular reporters who normally cover city news.

"It's up to the reporter, if he's going in, he'll go in; if he asks for a pass, that's OK, and some won't cross anyway," he said.

Fast Lockout Move Planned by Region

Lockout notice will be served and mediation officer Clark Gilmour will be asked to withdraw as soon as there is a single strike against any municipality, Capital Regional District board chairman, Jim Campbell, said today.

He commented after a mediation meeting Thursday with the Capital Regional District and Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 388. No date was set for a second mediation meeting, he said.

City outside workers, members of CUPE Local 50, received formal acknowledgement today that Gilmour's report has been filed and they are free to strike.

Local 50 president Jim Walker said several executive meetings have been arranged between today and Sunday at which a decision could be made on when a strike will start.

Gilmour remains the mediation officer in contract disputes involving the regional district, city inside staff, Greater Victoria Schoolboard, Saanich, Oak Bay and Sidney. No lockout can occur until he withdraws and until 72-hour lockout notice is served.

Campbell said there will not be a lockout until these legal procedures are cleared.

But, he added, "we will ask the mediation officer to file his report and serve lockout notice as soon as there is a strike."

Greater Victoria school board janitors, custodians and tradesmen, members of CUPE Local 382, were involved in a mediation meeting today. They have posted strike notice but cannot act until Gilmour withdraws.

The city outside workers have turned down an offer of 15.76 per cent wage increase for this year. This would amount to 70 cents an hour on their base rate of $4.42.

They want parity with Port Alberni municipal workers who received a 91 cents an hour increase on a base rate of $4.49, plus cost-of-living increases and a dental plan which have not been offered in Victoria.

The Regional Bargaining Group made up of Greater Victoria local government employers have rejected parity with Port Alberni.

Walker, meanwhile, was sending a letter to Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen today asking the mayor to intervene personally in negotiations.

"The public interest demands we make all efforts to avert a strike and that means that the mayor of the city become personally involved in the negotiations," he said.

"We're only asking for a fair wage for our members. Right now they're being paid much below the average in private industry and below other public servants in the province. They are in fact subsidizing the administration of the city of Victoria with their low wages. That has to end."

Pollen said that the Regional Bargaining Group already has its official spokesman in bargaining voice," but if it would help the situation the mayor said he would be ready to take a direct part in negotiations.

Pollen was speaking without having seen the CUPE letter, but he said in any case he had a meeting arranged later today with Walker for what he said was "a friendly, conciliatory chat."

FIVE-MAN B.C. Hydro crew works on moving power poles lining Finlayson between Cook and Quadra to one side of road as preliminary to long-delayed and controversial widening of street, which will provide two traffic lanes and one parking lane. But widening work could be delayed still further if threatened strike of city employees takes place.

It Could Bring New Hospital

The hospital at St. Mary's Priory in Langford will likely soon be turned over to a public agency, clearing the way for long-delayed hospital development in the area.

There are indications the Society of the Love of Jesus, which operates a 95-bed extended care hospital there, had only been awaiting Thursday's favorable B.C. Supreme Court ruling before giving up operation of the hospital.

Plans for expansion of the hospital, or its replacement on the gounds, have been in the wind for several years. They have always been postponed until the question of legal control of the society was settled.

"It's been our understanding that they'd like to get out of the extended care hospital business," Art Young, chairman of the regional hospital board, said today.

"Previous discussions indicated the society was even willing to donate the property to the Capital Regional District."

If the shelved plans develop along the lines of earlier talks, the hospital will likely be operated by the Juan de Fuca Hospital Society, a public society which now operates Glengarry and Mount Tolmie extended care hospitals.

Rover's Beach Stroll Out

Inspector Don Adams of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals today warned residents not to walk their dogs on beaches in the Dallas Road area.

An oil slick has settled in the area west of Clover Point, reaching around to McNeill Bay in Oak Bay, he said.

The slick was first reported to Adams last Friday. He spent all day in a boat Sunday, rescuing oil-smeared birds. About 24 birds have been treated since then.

Adams said the oil, a mixture of bunker fuel and diesel, probably came from a passing ship that was washing out her bilges.

It has now settled on rocks on the shoreline.

If a dog gets contaminated with oil, Adams said a veterinarian has advised the oil be wiped off after being smeared with margarine and the dog cleansed with Johnson's baby shampoo.

A minor oil spill also took place in Esquimalt Harbor Thursday.

The weathership Quadra spilled 50 gallons of bunker fuel when a valve jammed while the ship was fuelling and transferring ballast.

The spill was quickly contained in a boom set up by a crew, headed by Cmdr. Peter Birch-Jones, the Queen's harbor master.

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

More children enter high school each year without a solid grounding in the three R's, Greater Victoria trustees were told Thursday.

"Increasing numbers of students are entering the junior highs who do not seem to have the basic requirements in reading and mathematics," said the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association in a brief presented to a special committee meeting of the school board.

The teachers' request for more remedial help to deal with this problem was only one of a number of requests for better learning conditions presented to the committee.

It was, however, the problem that prompted greatest trustee concern.

Schools today offer so many options, said Janet Baird, that they "take away time spent on reading, writing and computation."

"What we're doing now is producing children at the end of Grade 12 who can't go on to a job", because of weakness in maths and reading, she said.

"We've cheated them," she added. "We've put in too many extras and not really given them what they need."

Trustee Peter Bunn marvelled that the board was spending more than $1,000 a year on each pupil, yet "we end up with youngsters going into junior high school with real problems in reading and writing."

Even some students graduating from Grade 12 are unable to read well enough, Bunn said.

"We've got some incredibly ineffective youngsters who are accepted by the university with open arms and immediately put into remedial classes."

The program has been running eight years and Prof. Grant McOrmand said today he's not aware of any decline in the ability of students taking the test.

Vic Thompson, head of curriculum for Greater Victoria School District, said today he has been aware of the growing problem, particularly with youngsters who can't read well.

"It's a problem with a minority of students, but it's an increasing minority," he said.

Thompson said part of the problem is that children today spend so much of their spare time watching television.

"They reach junior high not having spent the hours reading they used to," he said.

Junior high schools used not to have learning assistance teachers, he said. Now they do, and working mainly on reading problems.

Mavis DeGirolamo, president of the teachers' association, told trustees it was an oversimplification to say that schools should just concentrate on the three R's.

In today's world teachers must be concerned with more than the three basics, she said.

Win Littleton, chairman of the high school section of the GVTA's learning conditions committee, said the problem of lack of basic skills is an international one.

Solving it will require far more research than the GVTA is capable of doing, she said.

$4,000 TAKEN IN HOLDUP

Two men brandishing revolvers and wearing stockings over their heads held up a Victoria supermarket employee Thursday night and escaped with more than $4,000.

Victoria city police said Robert Andrew Arnold, an employee of Wilson's Warehouse Food Market, 47 Songhees, had just left the store after closing at 9 p.m. and was about to get into his truck when he noticed the front tire was flat.

Suddenly two men appeared over a bank leading down to the Inner Harbor and demanded the night deposit bag he was carrying.

"No one will get hurt if you do as we say," one of the men

his car keys and then go over the bank and not look around.

Arnold did as they said.

The men threw the keys down to him but they fell among rocks and he was unable to find them.

Staff Sgt. Angus Stewart said Arnold sat on a rock and waited for about five minutes afraid to move.

When he was sure the pair had fled he called police.

Stewart said about half the deposit was cash, half cheques.

Ask The Times

Q. I have a problem. There are geographic north and south poles on the earth; and there are magnetic north and south poles on the earth too. Some books say the geographic north pole and the magnetic north pole are on the same side of the equator, while others say they are on opposite sides of the equator. Can you quote official references to prove to me which of the above sayings is correct? S.L.

A. According to the World Book, both geographic and magnetic north poles are north of the equator. The geographic pole lies near the center of the arctic Ocean at the point where all the earth's lines of longitude meet.

The magnetic pole, the point toward which north-seeking compass needles point, can move many miles in a few years. In 1970, it was located near Bathurst Island in northern Canada.

Regained at Need, a Distant Paradise

PARADISE IS NEVER ENtirely lost. A man if he's lucky retains a few times and places into which he can escape when the present bears too harshly upon him. One of mine is a point of land that dips to a cove, climbs a knobbly brown hill, and reaches on past a deserted powder-works to the many-islanded Gulf. For a boy with all August in his hand, it was heaven unspoiled and complete.

I retreated to Powder Point for a while last week, when a prowling virus of the January horde sank its claws in me. It condemned me to the boredom of a darkened room with sore eyes and t grinding headache for company. Win read to me when she could take time from her busy day. But I couldn't read for myself, or watch television, and any attempt to put words on paper whipped the headache from a jog to a gallop.

A man out of love with his present and robbed of the energy to contemplate his future still has the past. So I returned to that pocket paradise not visited even in memory for many years.

The way to the point led across wide low-tide flats seamed with salt-water guts and tongued with salt grass. To a scrawny kid turned loose to wander, those flats were a wonderland in themselves.

The intertidal life with which they teemed gave them a voice of their own — a soft, continuing murmur sensed as much as heard. Sometimes their shallow pools that lay like dropped fragments of sky prisoned schools of shiner perch left behind by the ebb.

There were oysters on the flats, the little native Olympics so rarely seen today. There were clams and cockles for the taking, and monstrous bivalves called geoducks that poked hosepipe siphons from outer bars exposed only by the lowest tidefalls.

The moving hump under a shiny-green eelgrass blanket might be a warrior crab 10 inches across the shell, with ivory-tipped pincers at the ready. Always in sight was that most patient of fishermen, the great blue heron.

To a boy on this undulating plain, his feet in comfortably soaked running shoes and his plunder in a wet gunny sack, the point seemed distant. Then of a sudden it lifted close ahead, with seaweed tangled in the lowest boughs of its flanking arbutus trees.

A black-earth path ambled up from the beach. It paused at a concrete cistern, springfed, in which lived an aldermanic trout on no account to be jigged or tickled from his basin.

In the house lived a retired Welsh professor with the heart of a boy. His tartly-kind wife indulged him through a succession of inventions that refused to function and experiments that rarely succeeded. The professor owned a single-shot .22 caliber rifle with which he campaigned against the hawk that raided his wife's chickens.

One day he lay on his back for an hour in the grass, watching the hawk wheel its circles and while he calculated bullet velocity and trajectory, intersecting courses and other such abstruse matters. Then he raised the little rifle, waited his mathematically-exact moment, and dropped the hawk from the sky.

It had been a purely academic demonstration with never a thought for the end result. Shocked, the professor gaped at ruined splendor brought to earth. He vowed he would never again shoot any living creature. Then, failing once more to take probable consequence into account, he set rifle and cartridges in my hands.

The little single-shot gave paradise a new dimension. It was my companion, and a comfort on the dim road from the plateau where the professor's wife had once scatted a cougar with such no-nonsense authority that it hightailed for other parts.

There was the hidden cove tucked into the shoulder of Powder Hill, where a boy with a jury-rigged raft and seaworms for bait could fish as in an aquarium.

Out along the terrace at the base of the hill were ledges with rockfish and big black cod deep below. And a venturesome journey beyond the hill lay the powder-works half-shattered and deserted after a mighty blast of years gone by.

Once, long after, I tried to return to the point by car. But the road I remembered was out of bounds, kept so not by an Edenesque angel with flaming sword but by a bored guard with a carbine across his knees.

Still, this lost paradise served its purpose, and has done so again in a miserable week now over. My eyes are better, my headache has gone, and it's time to trade past for this welcome, flu-free present.

Of parents I loved and will never forget.
No longer here our lives to share,
But in our hearts they are always there.
—Sadly missed by daughter Thelma and family.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR HE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.

Cluster Plan For Saanich?

Municipal planner Tom Loney has been asked to prepare guidelines for cluster housing zoning.

Mayor Ed Lum said today the 20 cluster housing units in the Feltham-Tyndall area, built by a developer as a pilot project, had two weaknesses. The area was too small for such a project and the units should have been strata-title so arrangements could be made to maintain the open space of the subdivision.

"Cluster housing is a good thing and has been developed all through North America," Lum said, "But the pilot project is too small. It should be on a larger scale and strata-title so that we know the open areas will be maintained".

Both Lum and Loney said the municipality could not undertake to maintain open areas in subdivisions because of the high costs.

The Feltham area designated for cluster housing is roughly 15 acres. Lum said future cluster housing subdivisions should be 25 to 30 acres and, probably, developed by one developer.

In the pilot project, 20 lots have been developed and the remaining one utilized for open space. The problem, Lum said, was each resident was responsible for the open space next to his unit but there was no way of ensuring each resident maintained that part of the common land.

Loney said another problem was that there were five or six other parcels in the area designated for cluster housing with four or five developers applying to build subdivisions.

"We would have had less administrative problems if the area was being developed under one ownership," he said.

Future cluster subdivisions, Loney added, should be on a larger scale and, if not done by one developer, they should have an over-all plan agreed to by the participating developers.

Bingo Fund Trial To Resume Feb. 3

The trial of a Victoria couple charged with theft by conversion of $3,000 from the London Boxing and Athletic Club and its women's auxiliary was adjourned Thursday to Feb. 3.

The trial being heard in county court before Judge M. L. T. Drake against Harold and Ivy Morris, operators of the club, began Tuesday.

In the first two days of the complex trial, the crown, represented by lawyers David Lisson and Donald Farquhar, entered mostly financial records.

Farquhar alleged the Morrises were in control of the club and auxiliary during February 1971 and December 1972, the period the alleged thefts occurred.

He also contended the couple set aside cash from bingo games to pay accounts at B.C. Hydro and Victoria Press Ltd. and later paid these accounts through cheques drawn on the club's bank account. In doing so, he alleged, they converted cash to their own use.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A $500 fine and a two-year period of probation added up to a second chance for a 23-year-old man who appeared in provincial court Thursday facing charges laid last May 9 of possession of heroin and possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

Kenneth Wayne Ramsay, 1512 Brooke, pleaded guilty to the two charges.

"He should go to jail. I appreciate that," said Judge William Ostler, "but this is a special case wherein consideration should be given to the very great effort this young man has made toward rehabilitation from heroin addiction."

Prior to sentencing, the Crown said that Ramsay had a criminal record and was on probation when arrested for possession of six capsules of heroin.

Defence counsel Dermod Owen-Flood said, however that Ramsay's record was due to his addiction; that he had withdrawn from heroin and methadone, and had helped his wife Alice break her heroin addiction.

Ramsay testified that he had become a heroin addict through association with heroin users.

Caroline Haley, one of the founders of the Victoria Drug Concerned Society, testified that Ramsay has been in regular attendance at the drug clinic for a year and during this period she had noted a marked change in his character and lifestyle.

"He has been dissociating himself completely from those in the drug scene to the point of getting up early to go the clinic before others arrive," she said.

In his summary, Owen-Flood urged that Ramsay not be given a jail sentence, voicing his fear of relapse.

"This man has been to jail, he had experience there ... sending him back would not be helpful," Owen-Flood said.

Ostler said that deterrents were established for the public good and to sentence Ramsay to jail would be a deterrent; the difficulty presented in this case was to decide whether the deterrent or giving the young man a chance would be better for public good.

★ ★ ★

"The reason I was drunk last night," according to Arthur Elliot Inglis, 25, "was that my friends took me out to celebrate ... you see, I was suppose to leave Victoria today for employment in Yellowknife."

Inglis, of 473 Marigold St. pleaded guilty to a charge of impaired driving and received a 20-day jail sentence. His driver's licence was also suspended.

"I'm very sorry for you ... but your friends have caused you a great disservice," Ostler said.

"You have a previous conviction for impaired driving and thus I have no alternative but to give you a jail sentence."

★ ★ ★

Gerald Omer Roy, 30, of 1239 Oliver was ordered by Judge Fred Green to attend the impaired driving course after he pleaded guilty to an impaired driving charge.

Green also fined him $325 and prohibited him from driving for 15 days.

★ ★ ★

★ ★ ★

For two counts of breaking and entry, 17-year-old Edmund Robert Piggin of 1120 McClure was sentenced to New Haven correctional school for a period of six months definite and 18 months indeterminate.

The sentence is to run concurrently with Piggin's term of six months definite and nine months indeterminate received Dec. 30 for a break-in and possession of marijuana.

Piggin pleaded guilty to two other charges of breaking and entering. The break-ins occurred Dec. 2 and Dec. 6, while he was on judicial interim release for the marijuana charge.

★ ★ ★

Bail was set at $2,000 for a 20-year-old man charged with robbery with violence in a hold-up at a Safeway store Jan. 10. Richard Dale Smith of 820 Orono, is alleged to have taken $847 from a woman cashier.

★ ★ ★

A five-day jail term was ordered by Ostler for Albert M. Laberge, 17, of 532 Cecilia, who pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana.

Five baggies of marijuana were discovered on Laberge when police searched a house on 511 Frances.

In his sentence, Ostler noted Laberge had a juvenile record and at the time of his arrest was unlawfully at large from a juvenile detention home at Haney in the Fraser Valley.

Leland Edward Niessen, 30, of 994 Londonderry, was fined $75 after pleading guilty to possession of marijuana.

Two joints were found on Niessen when he was checked by police early Thursday in the Yates St. parkade.

Spending Blitz For CIDA

Aid Plan Wisdom Probed

By DONALD MacDONALD
Times London Bureau

LONDON — The wisdom of a Canadian aid project in Tanzania is questioned in a leading British scientific magazine this week.

The New Scientist says a newly automated bakery set up with the help of more than $1 million in Canadian tax revenue in Dar es Salaam may not be the best idea for that country at its current stage of development.

The magazine says small bakeries in Dar es Salaam had been providing sufficient bread using wood or charcoal burning boilers and a flexible range of raw materials, including maize, during the recent wheat shortage.

A condition of the loan was that Canadian equipment supplied by a company called Baker-Perkins be used. The new plant, 100-per-cent imported from Canada, has an oil-fired boiler and must have all spare parts imported from Canada, according to the New Scientist.

Furthermore, "the bakery requires 50 per cent hard wheat, which has to be imported as it cannot be grown locally."

The cost-per-job is rated at $46,000 as opposed to $2,000 had the existing Dar es Salaam technology been used.

Production in local bakeries "has to be cut" and employment in the industry "will stagnate for the next few years."

OTTAWA — The Canadian International Development Agency is rushing to spend $117 million within the next three months in an effort to impress Treasury Board officials.

Lagging disbursements in the bilateral branch of CIDA are believed to be causing concern because they shortfall the Treasury Board's $497.95 million limit set for 1974-75 bilateral spending.

CIDA apparently feels it must spend the leftover $117 million in order to strengthen its bargaining position when the Treasury considers the agency's 1975-76 cash allocation.

This effort tends to bear out one of the main contentions of CIDA dissidents — that the chief emphasis in the agency is placed on producing figures to support an impression that Canada is in the vanguard of nations providing development assistance.

The purpose is to meet the target of the World Bank's Commission on International Development headed by Lester B. Pearson, the late Prime Minister. This suggested that by 1975 official aid should reach 0.7 per cent of the gross national product of donor countries.

In fact, the Canadian government has never set a specific date for achieving this objective. It remains a CIDA preoccupation without official sanction.

It is understood that of the several government departments and agencies represented on the Canadian International Development Board, only CIDA favors setting a date for the 0.7 per cent objective.

"Your career in CIDA depends on how you spend," a former Agency official said. "You are constantly being

Salary increases averaging more than 20 per cent and ranging as high as 44 per cent for certain civil servants are included in new component contracts negotiated with the provincial government.

Details of the contracts are officially being kept secret by both the government and the B.C. Government Employees' Union (BCGEU) pending completion of contracts with all 13 occupation groups.

But nine of the components have already negotiated their first individual contracts and some of their new salary schedules have been released through cabinet orders.

Comparing the 1973 salary schedules with the available new wage scales reveals some junior categories of civil servants have been granted increases amounting to 44 per cent.

Four component settlements were used in the comparison and three of those granted across-the-board increases to all members of the occupational group.

The largest group, the Administrative Support Component, granted all 7,700 members a $100-monthly increase effective April 1, 1974, and an additional $60 increase effective Oct. 1, 1974.

In addition, each category was granted another increase on Jan. 1 and those increases appear to amount to about four per cent over the Oct. 1 salary level.

The combined increases mean a 44 per cent salary hike for those in Clerk 1 positions, who will go from $420 a month in 1973 to $605 a month as of Jan. 1.

For top clerks, the increase is about 26 per cent; for top key punch operators it amounts to 27 per cent; and for the lowest category of surveyors in the land registry branch it means about a 28 per cent increase.

Some groups have been granted cost-of-living increases, including the Administrative, Regulatory and Fiscal Component.

About 1,350 senior administrative people in that group appear to have been granted a $125 increase across-the-board as of April 1, 1974, and another, varying increase on Oct. 1, 1974, in addition to a cost-of-living hike.

Those increases, excluding the cost-of-living bonus, appear, for example, to amount to about 28 per cent for junior adminstration officers, about 23 per cent for junior appraisers, 26 per cent for senior appraisers, 34 per cent for junior driver examiners and 23 per cent for deputy sheriffs.

The cost-of-living index in the agreement is described in

Second Research Officer Quits

Maureen Stirling, a research officer within the department of education's problem-riddled research and development division has resigned.

She told the Times from Vancouver today she sent a telegram to deputy minister Jack Fleming at 8 p.m. Thursday "advising of my resignation effective immediately."

She said she is shocked at the atrocious behavior of Fleming following the firing of the division head Stanley B. Knight last week.

"I no longer see it possible to work in the division. The mandate given us was to implement the White Paper on education and it no longer seems to be possible, with the subsequent muzzling of division staff after Dr. Knight was fired."

She said she attended one meeting with the deputy minister and division workers were told then that the probation of all the workers would be extended indefinitely.

"He chose his words very carefully and didn't say when the probation would end. It adds to the anxiety among all the division staff," she said.

Reason given for probation extension was simply that "no one could be evaluated fairly at this point in time," she added.

Stirling said Fleming told division members he is hiring four consultants, headed by University of Victoria's dean of education George Pedersen to evaluate the "capabilities" of the division.

"It looks as if the division will not be able to do anything in the field of education for quite some time," she said.

Short-Term Loan Rates Collapsing

Short-term interest rates continued to collapse across North America today, apparently to counter the competition from Arab oil countries loaning billions at 8 per cent.

Canadian banks and trust companies have reduced the rate they will pay for short-term money to 6.5 per cent (or to 6 per cent in some cases), down from 10.5 per cent two months ago.

The Bank of Montreal announced Thursday it will drop its major interest categories effective Feb. 1, with the prime rate falling to 9.75 per cent from 10.5 per cent.

Other banks are expected to do the same.

The banks had cut the rate from 11 per cent to 10.5 per cent two weeks ago.

A further drop is expected in mortgage interest rates as well. They are down to 11.5 per cent from 12 per cent and a further decline to 10.75 per cent has been forecast.

"This drop could come any day," a spokesman for a Victoria trust company said.

Meanwhile, J. A. Baines, manager of the main branch of the Bank of Montreal in Victoria, said today there had been no word of changes in mortgages rates in the general rate decline announced by his company in Montreal.

"Undoubtedly there will be

Maclean's Revives Plans for Weekly

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The president of Maclean-Hunter Ltd., Donald Campbell said Thursday his company will reactivate planning for publication of a weekly newsmagazine in the wake of the federal government's decision to cancel tax privileges to Time and Reader's Digest.

"We've done some rough work for the past few years that we had to put on the shelf," he said.

"Now, we'll take it off the shelf."

Maclean - Hunter is the owner of Maclean's Magazine and one option would be to turn Macleans from its present montnly format into a weekly news publication, Campbell said.

The legislative changes, however, produced differing responses from Time and Reader's Digest.

Stephen LaRue, president of Time Canada, said the decision will mean the death of the Canadian edition of Time which features about 10 per cent Canadian content.

Reader's Digest was more optimistic.

The government wants to provide incentives for creation of Canadian news magazines said Hancox and if they now are not formed "it will be a great tragedy."

Because Reader's Digest "is not in competition with news magazines," Hancox speculated legislation would perhaps be amended to permit the publication's Canadian advertisers to continue deducting advertising fees from their income tax.

He was confident the government would not jeopardize the future of the Reader's Digest Canadian edition, although State Secretary Hugh Faulkner said the proposed changes would affect that publication.

NO REAL ANSWER

OTTAWA (CP) — Questions fired at Prime Minister Trudeau regarding a reported multi-million dollar spending spree by the Canadian International Development Agency drew response, but no real answers, from House Leader Mitchell Sharp in the Commons Thursday.

Sharp merely reiterated an earlier promise by External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen that CIDA will be studied by a Commons committee.

Congress, Unions Angered by Ford

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Acting before Democrats in Congress could stop him and over the protests of many groups including the AFL-CIO, President Ford Thursday signed into law his plan to increase oil-import fees.

The action will raise gasoline prices at least three cents a gallon and also poses the possibility of a Congressional veto showdown from angered lawmakers, many of whom favored a gasoline rationing program.

Governors of at least four northeastern states, which depend heavily on imported oil, also promised suits attempting to overturn the tariff.

George Meany, President of the AFL-CIO called Ford's overall plan to deal with problems of energy and recession "the weirdest" and unveiled alternative proposals.

The giant labor federation called for gas rationing and a ban on imports of oil from countries which embargoed shipments to the United States and the Netherlands last year.

The order Ford signed Thursday creates a $1 a barrel tariff on imported oil effective Feb. 1, rising to $3 in April.

"It seemed to me the time for conversation had ended and we had to act," the President explained on a television interview Thursday night.

Ford hopes the tariff will begin to reduce U.S. dependence on foreign oil and that higher gas prices will persuade Americans to conserve fuel.

"We've diddled and dawdled long enough," he said at an impromptu news conference after signing the proclamation.

Union Leader Shot

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Terrorists killed a provincial labor leader today and the home of a newspaperman was bombed in a new upsurge of violence in Argentina.

CN SHUT DOWN

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian National Railways' transcontinental rail service was suspended Thursday night after trains were cancelled in New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario and the West because of walkouts of locomotive engineers.

Alberta and British Columbia were the most severely affected, with the CNR suspending virtually all freight and passenger services in the two provinces, effective today.

The engineers began booking off sick or for study sessions across Canada Thursday and would give no indication when they will return to work.

They are seeking a change in their contract to give them the same 15-per-cent wage increase that members of other railway unions received Jan. 1. The members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers are not due to receive their 15-per-cent increase until May 1.

Caught or Not, Smuggled Men's Future Bleak

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Young Punjabi men illegally smuggled into Canada face a grim future if they are caught and sent back to India — but the outlook is almost as bleak if their entry attempt is successful.

The men, usually young and usually married, often spend the rest of their days paying off a mortgage company debt if they are caught and sent home.

But if they slip into the country undetected, they face a life indentured to the agent who lured them to Canada with tales of prosperity and happiness.

The Victoria immigration office earlier this week broke a smuggling operation which brought 25 of the young Punjabis into Victoria International airport between Dec. 20 and Jan. 20.

Twelve of them have already been deported and others, with relatives in Canada, were allowed to stay for a three-month visit after first posting a cash bond ensuring their departure after the three months are up.

The agent who lured the men here is also an East Indian who lives off his own people, to the great disgust of the East Indian community.

"In every country there are people who try to take advantage of their own people," says Ajaib Singh Sangha, one of the elders of Victoria's Sikh community.

"The farms are in the family. They are passed down from father to son, father to son, and many families have been on the same piece of land for 400 or 500 years."

"He tells them, we'll take you there, to Canada, where there are lots of jobs for everyone and lots of money," Sangha says.

"And these people fall victim to their own ignorance. They are law-abiding and peaceful. If they knew the laws and regulations they wouldn't come here."

But the young men are taken in. They mortgage the family farm to get enough money to put a down payment on the agent's asking price for a ticket to Canada, which often runs as high as $10,000.

"They are easy prey for these agents," Sangha says. "Then if they are caught and sent back, the farm is already mortgaged."

If the years are good, the family can work on paying off the mortgage, but if the years are bad, the farm can be repossessed, and then they have nothing.

Sangha himself came to Canada 50 years ago, legally, and has raised a family of four sons and two daughters.

He knows the problems faced by the Indian immigrants who come here in accord with the immigration laws.

For those who come illegally, the hardships are much worse.

A few years ago, sawmills and the outpost logging camps were a favorite repository of new East Indian immigrants, both legal and illegal.
